Synopsis: Request authorization to open case in the above matter.

Details: United States Attorney Scott R. Lassar, requested that the Chicago FBI initiate an investigation into the Duff's activities. The request followed several articles published by the Chicago Tribune revealing allegations that the Duff family and their businesses, WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE, WINDY CITY LABOR, and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (R.E.M.) received approximately $100 million from the city of Chicago since Mayor Richard Daley was elected. The allegations involve mail fraud/wire fraud in relation to the city contracts obtained by WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE and possible violations of the Taft/Hartley Act and kickbacks in relation to the use of non-union members at Local 3 businesses.

Family mops up on city deals

Insiders with mob ties profit from mayor's push to privatize

By Andrew Martin, Laurie Cohen
and Ray Gibson

TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

A month after Richard Daley became Chicago's mayor, Patricia Green launched a janitorial company called Windy City Maintenance even though she had no experience in the field.

Windy City's stunning success since then—it now takes in about $13 million a year in city-related business—might seem like an uplifting tale of the city helping a woman-owned firm get established.

But a Tribune investigation reveals that Windy City's story actually features political insiders tied to City Hall and to organized-crime members in Chicago and South Florida.

Windy City Maintenance isn't run by Patricia Green, and Patricia Green isn't her full name either. Instead, Patricia Green is the maiden name of 71-year-old Patricia Green Duff, and her company is run by the men in the Duff family.

The Tribune found that three companies connected to the family have collected nearly $100 million from city-related contracts during Daley's mayoral tenure, thanks to clout and the largess created by privatization of municipal services.

Privatization has been crucial to Daley's effort to forge a national reputation as a progressive, no-nonsense administrator. But many of the mayor's "good government" programs, from towing abandoned cars to resurfacing streets, have also provided lucrative deals for Daley's friends and political allies while reducing public scrutiny of city services.

The Duff family fortunes have been cultivated by patriarch John Duff Jr., a savvy former union boss and charming barroom companion. Duff, 74, was known for singing through the night in a South Florida tavern and presiding over a legendary Christmas party at the Como Inn, where bands and guests overflowed into the corridors of the popular Near West Side restaurant.

Duff also is known for his connections to organized crime.

In 1960, Duff was a city investigator, tavern keeper and union official when he testified on behalf of mob boss Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, who faced income-tax fraud charges. Duff's testimony that he purchased beer from Accardo helped the mobster's

In 1993, the city questioned R.E.M.'s viability. But since 1995, it has collected $36 million from city contracts.

Windy City Maintenance cashes in at Navy Pier and McCormick Place

In 1996, the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority sought cost proposals from companies for a five-year contract to clean Navy Pier and McCormick Place.

Initial bids submitted

On April 18, 1996, Windy City Maintenance submitted a proposal to clean the facilities and it was the fourth lowest among the finalists. The agency, however, asked the firms to clarify their proposals, which were resubmitted.

COMPANY	Bid in millions
Ogden	$6.24 million
United Maintenance	$7.23
ISS Building Maintenance	$7.81
Windy City Maintenance	$8.12
ServiceMaster	$11.17

Windy City comes out on top

When the new proposals were submitted on April 29, 1996, Windy City Maintenance's was less than its original, while the other bids had increased. It won the contract.

COMPANY	Bid in millions
Windy City Maintenance	$6.85 million
Ogden	$6.92
ISS Building Maintenance	$9.49
United Maintenance	$11.69
ServiceMaster	$11.74

Actual cost

During the first 13 months of its contract, Windy City was actually paid $3.8 million more than its winning proposal.

City-related contracts

Since Richard M. Daley took office in 1989, Duff-related companies have earned almost $100 million in business from the city and city-related agencies. Contracts by company:

Windy City Maintenance

(Listed owner: Patricia Green)

City payments

From special events office, Police Department and others:

$6.8 million

City subcontracts*

Harold Washington Library, O'Hare's International Terminal:

Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority

Remedial Environmental Manpower

Subcontract for Chicago Blue Bag recycling program*

Curtis Storage and Trucking

(Listed president: James Duff)

City payments

Mostly from Departments of Streets and Sanitation and Fleet Management:

$1.1 million

The Duff family connections

The men of the politically connected Duff family are linked by their roles in organized labor and in family companies.

John Duff Jr., 74
One-time director of Windy City Maintenance Former executive in liquor union known as Local 3
He has been tied to organized crime, and in 1982, he pleaded guilty to federal charges of embezzling union funds

Patricia (Green) Duff, 71
Listed as president and sole owner of Windy City Maintenance Although Patricia had no experience in the business field, her company spent from 1989 to 1996 approximately $60 million in city-related work since Daley took office. Despite her title, interviews and court records revealed that her sons actually run the company.

John III, 47
Works for Windy City Maintenance, according to former employees
Secretary/treasurer of Local 3 union
He was paid by another Duff company, Remedial Environmental Manpower. Arrested nine times, once for threatening to kill a police officer, he has never been convicted.

Patrick, 45
Works for Windy City Maintenance, according to former employees
President of Local 3 union
A union official identified Patrick as his contact at Windy City Maintenance. Payroll records show that Patrick made $254,000 from the firm in 1996.

James, 41
Operates Windy City Maintenance on a day-to-day basis, according to public officials and former employees Served as unpaid vice president of Local 3 union
He incorporated Windy City Maintenance in May 1989, one month after Daley was sworn into office. He is not listed on the company's organizational chart.

Duff: Firms tied to one family have pulled in $100 million from the city since Daley became mayor.

defense, but it ended up costing Duff his city post when his supervisors learned he was holding three jobs at once.

Two decades later, Duff was secretly recorded by federal authorities bragging about his friendship with mob bosses Anthony Spilotro and Frank Buccieri. And in 1982, Duff pleaded guilty to federal charges of embezzling union funds in Chicago and Detroit and began serving 17 months in prison.

Duff's sons grew up in Oak Park and have followed their father into business and organized labor. Patrick Duff, 45, is now president of Local 3 of the Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union. James Duff, 41, runs the family companies with help from his brothers.

Only John Duff III, 47, a Local 3 executive, has been associated with organized crime like his father. He testified in 1992 that mob boss Ernest Rocco Infelice gave him a break on a gambling debt, and he boasted about his organized-crime ties when he was arrested in Miami Beach in 1993 for threatening to kill a police officer, charges that were later dismissed.

Along with his father, John Duff III was investigated by the FBI for allegedly running an illegal gambling operation in South Florida in 1994 with mobsters, including at least one member of New York's Gambino crime family, according to court records. The investigation fell apart because the lead FBI agent undermined the probe to cover his own gambling problem. The agent was later convicted and sentenced to 5 years in prison; no one else was charged.

Over the years, Duff family members have held at least two fundraisers for Daley, including a February breakfast buffet where the mayor and Patrick Duff went from table to table to greet guests, according to several people at the event.

The Duffs have provided workers on Election Day for Daley-backed candidates, and among the family members, the union and the businesses, the Duffs have contributed about $32,000 to Daley's campaigns.

For their part, Daley and his aides have quietly turned the Duffs into significant players in the competition for lucrative contracts at City Hall and city-related agencies.

The Duffs, through an attorney, declined to comment.

Daley also declined an interview, but his spokeswoman, Jacquelyn Heard, dismissed claims that Daley steered business to the Duffs or aided their city business in any way.

"There is absolutely nothing to substantiate that claim that this business was gotten at the behest of the mayor," she said. "There are rules that govern the awarding of contracts, and the City of Chicago abides by those."

A new company thrives

Soon after he was elected to office in 1989, Daley allegedly instructed a top staff member, the late Kathy Osterman, to make sure that the Duffs got a share of city work.

"When Kathy became special events director, there were certain people who were recommended to her by Daley that she should do business with," said her widower, Bruce DuMont, president of the Museum of Broadcast Communications. "The Duffs were among the coterie of people she was supposed to do business with."

"My impression from talking to Kathy was that the mayor and Mr. Duff were longtime friends," DuMont said, referring to the eldest Duff.

The Mayor's Office of Special Events handed Windy City Maintenance a no-bid contract in 1990 to clean up after Taste of Chicago, setting the stage for the Duff family to begin profiting from municipal business under the new mayor.

The contract, which the company has held ever since, now covers all the major festivals at Grant Park and the Air and Water Show.

The special events office pays Windy City Maintenance more than $500,000 a year.

The deal was made possible by a change to an ordinance that had previously allowed the special events director to save time by negotiating contracts directly with entertainers and food vendors without bidding. In 1990, the ordinance was changed to include janitorial contracts too.

Asked why Windy City Maintenance's work should be covered by the ordinance, James Law, who is now executive director of special events, said: "They've got a proven track record based on performance and reliability. We can't take the risk every year to start with a new maintenance contractor."

In documents filed with the city, Patricia Green is listed as the 100 percent owner and president at Windy City, and her name sits atop the company's organizational chart that is noticeably free of the Duff name, according to documents.

State records, however, show that the company was incorporated by James Duff, a month after Daley was elected mayor. Based on interviews with people familiar with Windy City's operations, the company really is run by James Duff and to a lesser extent his two brothers.

"I have seen Patricia Green twice, and I worked at Windy City from 1990 to 1996," said Kenny Bledsoe, a former supervisor for the company. "I have never spoken to her."

Bledsoe, a plaintiff in a federal class-action lawsuit against Windy City Maintenance, said his bosses were James and Patrick Duff; he also had dealings with John Duff III. The lawsuit, which alleged racial discrimination, was settled last month.

Bledsoe's observation was echoed by James Reilly, former chief executive officer at the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, the government agency that oversees McCormick Place and Navy Pier. Reilly said he dealt with James Duff at Windy City.

And Rod Bashir, a vice president of Local 1 of the Service Employees International Union, also said he talks to Patrick Duff when there are union matters involving Windy City.

The Duff men have shared in Windy City's profits too. In 1995, according to sources who reviewed payroll records, the company paid Patricia Green Duff $322,000, her husband $346,000 and James Duff $118,000. A year later, Patrick Duff was paid $254,000 by Windy City Maintenance, the sources said.

Still, Windy City's status as a woman-owned business has allowed the company to cash in on city policies that require city contractors to share a portion of their payday with women and minorities. Under the city's affirmative-action policies, 25 percent of city work is supposed to be awarded to firms owned by women or racial minorities; as a result, city contractors typically hire these firms as subcontractors.

To be certified, a company must be more than half-owned by women or minorities, and they also must run the day-to-day operations of the company. The certifications are reviewed annually.

The city stamp of approval

Windy City Maintenance's application for woman-owned status sailed through the city's approval process in less than two months, even though city officials said the process usually takes three times that long.

Everything seemed to be in order when a city compliance officer stopped by Windy City Maintenance's offices and found Patricia Green "busy on the phone doing sales," according to city records.

But the records also suggest that the visit may not have been a surprise, as is supposed to be the case. The day before, James Duff called city officials to ask what documents he would need to supply when the compliance officer visited the office, records show.

City officials could not recall whether Windy City Maintenance got advance warning about the visit.

When Tribune reporters visited Windy City Maintenance one morning last week, looking for Patricia Green, a receptionist said she had just stepped out. James Duff was busy in a meeting. And John Duff Jr., who was walking into the office as the reporters left, declined to answer questions.

Windy City Maintenance was certified as a woman-owned business on Oct. 1, 1991, on the same day it began work as a subcontractor at the Harold Washington Library Center.

Because Windy City Maintenance's contract isn't directly with the city and is in the form of a subcontract, the details of how the firm was selected are not open for public scrutiny. The subcontract, from a private firm hired by the city to manage the library building, pays Windy City Maintenance about $1.6 million a year, city records show.

Once the company was certified as woman-owned, a competitor wrote a letter to Daley raising questions about Green's ownership.

"I do believe it is my moral obligation to question this particular award on behalf of all minorities since many of us in this case strongly question the woman-owned status of Windy City Maintenance," wrote Angelo Velasquez, then president of A&R Janitorial Service, who is now deceased. "Is the said owner truly involved in the day-to-day operation of this business?"

After Velasquez's letter, city officials called Windy City Maintenance seeking a more detailed résumé from Green, but James Duff, who took the call, explained that she was out of town, records show.

City officials could not explain why they waited until after Windy City's certification was approved to do such routine checkups as requesting Green's résumé and calling a reference listed by the company.

More dubious claims

The minority certification request by Remedial Environmental Manpower, another Duff company, did not go so smoothly.

R.E.M., as the company is known, was formed in 1988 by Patricia Green and William Stratton, now 58, who is African-American. Stratton worked for the Duffs' union as far back as 1978 and has been a director of Windy City Maintenance.

By the time the company applied for its minority certification in 1993, Stratton owned 55 percent of the company, and the other 45 percent was owned by Ellen Niemeier, according to records the company submitted to the city. Niemeier is the maiden name of Ellen Duff, James Duff's wife.

City officials turned down R.E.M.'s initial application, saying in a September 1993 letter that Stratton "appears to be substantially reliant on James Duff," in part because the company shared its employees and office space with Duff-controlled companies, including Windy City Maintenance and Windy City Labor, a day-labor service.

Also, R.E.M.'s references said they had never heard of Stratton and had dealt instead with James Duff or others.

R.E.M. finally won certification in 1994 after Stratton assured the city that he owned the entire company. City officials said they lost documents explaining why the company's minority certification was approved.

But the next year, when R.E.M. sought to renew its minority-owned status, some city officials questioned whether it was really run by Stratton and recommended that its certification be denied. The recommendation, however, was overruled by top Purchasing Department officials.

Troy Ratliff, a deputy purchasing agent for the city, said he recommended that R.E.M.'s certification be approved because the Duffs had moved their businesses to another office, leaving R.E.M. to operate on its own.

But the Tribune found that R.E.M. is hardly independent of the Duffs.

Although Windy City Maintenance moved into a rehabbed building several blocks away from R.E.M.'s office at Lake and Halsted Streets, another Duff company, Windy City Labor, continues to operate from the Halsted Street location.

On a recent Thursday morning, men began trickling into the R.E.M. office about 5 a.m. seeking day jobs from Windy City Labor. One of them said he had sought work there on several occasions and been paid with checks from Windy City Labor.

And R.E.M.'s office is located in a building that is owned or leased by the Duff Family Trust, according to county property records. Payroll records from 1996 show that John Duff III was paid $73,000 by the company, sources said.

During a recent visit to R.E.M., a man answered the door wearing a shirt with a Windy City Maintenance logo. He declined to comment.

Winning minority certification has been critical to R.E.M.'s success.

In 1993, the company had so little business that a city official declared that R.E.M. "does not appear to be a viable business," according to city records. But in 1995, it was plucked by Waste Management as the main minority subcontractor on the city's huge Blue Bag recycling program.

At the time, Waste Management's chief executive officer was Phillip Rooney, a close friend of Daley's. Waste Management also has hired Windy City Maintenance to clean a waste-transfer facility, and a third Duff-related firm, Curtis Storage and Trucking, to haul garbage from its Goose Island facility.

R.E.M., through its Blue Bag subcontract, has collected more than $36 million, despite complaints about the working conditions for its employees. R.E.M. employees staged a near riot at one garbage sorting center in 1995 because of a payroll dispute, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has fined R.E.M. $72,458 for inadequately protecting its workers from risks related to syringes in the garbage.

Dan McDonald, who oversees garbage sorting centers in Chicago for Waste Management, said R.E.M. does good work and "looks like and sounds like and acts like a minority-owned company." McDonald said his contact at R.E.M. has been Stratton and another African-American man.

Bidding goes Duffs' way

The success of the companies tied to the Duffs hasn't been confined to City Hall. In 1996, Windy City Maintenance won its biggest public contract, at the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority. Half of the authority's board members are selected by the mayor of Chicago, the other half by the governor.

The contract came after the authority decided to replace its own cleaning staff with a private company, following a trend embraced by Daley to privatize government services as a cost-cutting measure. But authority officials struggle to this day to explain how Windy City Maintenance won the business.

Among the finalists for the contract in April 1996, three submitted bids lower than Windy City's. But the proposals were revised a few days later, after authority officials met separately with each of the finalists and asked for new estimates.

All the new proposals contained higher numbers except for one: Windy City Maintenance. The firm's new bid of $6.8 million was actually $1.3 million lower than its original offer, and Windy City was awarded a five-year contract to clean McCormick Place and Navy Pier.

Nevertheless, Windy City Maintenance's first-year bill was a whopping $10.6 million—nearly $4 million more than its winning proposal. About a quarter of what Windy City Maintenance gets under the contract goes to minority subcontractors, authority documents show.

Authority spokesman John Torre said some of the extra cost resulted from an unexpected delay in a plan to require exhibitors to clean the floors during trade shows. Windy City Maintenance also was paid for additional landscaping work, he said.

"Ultimately, the bottom line here was cost savings," he said.

As for how Windy City Maintenance won the business in the first place, Torre couldn't explain why the company was able to lower its second proposal while the other finalists had to raise their bids.

Family's janitorial ties to Daley ought to be cleaned up

If you want to know how Mayor Richard M. Daley runs Chicago, get a copy of Sunday's Tribune and read the front page.

Everyone who cares about Chicago should read the story by reporters Andrew Martin, Laurie Cohen and Ray Gibson.

Because their story tells you how Chicago works. It comes down to this:

Law-and-order Mayor Daley has given $100 million of your tax dollars in city contracts to a family loaded with Mafia connections, from Chicago to New York to Florida.

The $100 million went to the Duff family. The Duffs run Windy City Maintenance and other janitorial businesses that clean government buildings. The businesses are supposed to be run by an elderly grandmother.

But the story shows the bosses of the cleaning business are actually the Duff men, led by their patriarch John Duff Jr. He's Daley's pal.

The Duffs have also bragged about their connections to the Outfit, and bosses like Rocco Infelice and the late Anthony Spilotro and Frank "Fili" Buccieri, not to mention the late Tony Accardo.

And the Duffs were also recently under federal investigation in Florida, suspected of running a gambling operation with New York's Gambino crime family.

One of the Duff sons allegedly threatened to use Outfit muscle to kill a police officer who arrested him for picking up prostitutes in Florida. He promised to keep the officer alive long enough to see him kill that officer's wife and children one by one.

According to the police officer in his official police report, John Duff III, 47, was angry that the cop put handcuffs on him.

"[Duff] stated that if I did not remove his handcuffs immediately and let him go, he was going to find this officer and my family and kill them one by one while this officer watched,"

_____ according to the police report.

The mayor gave personal orders

... to make sure the Duffs got to wet their beaks.

_____ These choice snippets from the officer's report were not included in Sunday's story, but I thought you would want the full flavor of the people who kiss Daley's hand.

John Duff III has never been convicted, even though he has been arrested nine times. He wasn't convicted of threatening to kill the police officer either. Instead, he took an anger management class. The case was dismissed, like magic.

And that federal gambling investigation magically collapsed too. It seems the lead FBI agent on the case helped kill the investigation when it turned out he had a gambling problem. The agent went to prison and no one else was charged.

The Duffs must be wizards. In fairness, of the four Duff men, only two have police records. The other two are probably altar boys.

Shortly after Daley got elected a decade ago, the Duffs went into business. The mayor gave personal orders to his people to make sure the Duffs got to wet their beaks.

One official was the late Kathy Osterman, who ran the Department of Special Events under Daley. Her widower, Bruce DuMont, says the mayor personally told her to take care of the Duffs.

"... There were certain people who were recommended to her by Daley that she should do business with," DuMont was quoted as saying. "The Duffs were among the coterie of people she was supposed to do business with. . . . My impression . . . was that the mayor and Mr. Duff were longtime friends."

DuMont is president of the Museum of Broadcast Communications located in the Chicago Cultural Center. He's got a national political talk radio show and is one of the most respected reporters in the country.

Does Daley have the guts to stand up personally and call DuMont a liar? I don't think so.

Because of Daley's help, the Duffs got contracts to clean O'Hare Airport, McCormick Place and to clean up after the Taste of Chicago.

Ooops. I almost forgot other city contracts. Like the one to clean the 911 Center, where all sorts of sensitive law enforcement information is gathered; and other Police Department buildings too. Not bad for a family with mob ties.

As political pals, the Duffs throw fundraisers for Daley, and he attends their parties—including one campaign brunch where Daley put his arm around one of the Duffs with a clean police record, and walked from table to table, saying hello to his supporters.

The table walk was Daley's message. And everybody in Chicago politics got it. I asked some political players how long it took to send that message across the state.

"How long does it take to pick up a cell phone?" said one guy who understands the connections between the Outfit and Chicago politics. "Daley was waving his flag, saying, 'These are my guys.' Everybody got it."

This week, we'll see if Daley plays dumb. We'll also see how other news organizations in town react to the story. We'll see who wants to be the mayor's puppy.

Daley is the former state's attorney who brags about his intimate knowledge of organized crime figures and Outfit ways. His friends sure do have intimate knowledge, too.

And it only cost you $100 million.

Duffs' liquor concerns a mismatch

By Laurie Cohen, Ray Gibson
and Andrew Martin
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

The politically influential Duff family, at the center of a controversy involving $100 million in city-related contracts, runs a day-labor company that allegedly undermines members of the union the family also controls.

Through Windy City Labor Service, the Duffs have allegedly been supplying nonunion workers to liquor distributors even though the family also runs the Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union Local 3.

In recent interviews, homeless men and other laborers have told the Tribune that they were hired by Windy City to work in the liquor industry. For instance, James McCrae said two years ago he was unemployed and homeless when Windy City Labor sent him to one of the city's main liquor distributors, where he helped load alcohol onto trucks for delivery to stores, among other tasks. "We're basically muscle," McCrae said.

And union officials representing truck drivers who deliver the liquor to stores said in interviews that Windy City laborers have been replacing virtually all of the Local 3 union workers who loaded trucks at Pacific Wine & Spirits in Chicago, one of the city's major distributors of alcoholic beverages.

Former employees and industry insiders said the jobs provided by the temporary workers represent a conflict of interest for the Duff family, since day laborers are doing some of the same jobs normally handled by members of the union the Duffs control.

Legal experts said the liquor distributors' use of temporary workers could be a violation of national labor laws if Local 3's contracts require that only full-time union-represented workers be employed. Past contracts, dating back to the early 1980s have included such provisions, but the current contracts are not available for public review.

The Duff family, through its attorney, declined to comment, and an attorney for Local 3 didn't return phone calls. The union had 1,387 members at the end of 1997, the most recent figures available.

The Tribune revealed Sunday that companies tied to the Duffs, including Windy City Maintenance, have made about $100 million from city-related business in the decade since Mayor Richard M. Daley has been in office. The family, which includes members who have been tied to organized crime, has raised money for the mayor's campaigns and has provided workers to campaign for Daley and Daley-backed candidates.

The Duffs' dealings with City Hall illustrate how the family has used political clout to further its business interests over the last decade, but the family can trace its power in organized labor back at least 40 years.

In 1960, John Duff Jr. was an official for the Retail Liquor Salesmen Local 162 when he testified on behalf of then mob-boss Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo when Accardo was on trial.

Duff later became a vice president of the Allied Distillery and Wine Workers International Union and an official of the union's Chicago affiliate, Local 3.

In 1982, Duff, 74, began serving 17 months in prison for embezzling union funds. His sons have run the union ever since.

Patrick Duff is Local 3's $99,500-a-year president, and John Duff III is the $97,000-a-year secretary/treasurer, according to federal Labor Department records from 1998, the most recent year available. Duff's third son, James, a former unpaid union vice president, was paid a total of $107,500 as an employee of one of the union's pension funds in 1995 and 1996, federal records show.

John Duff III is facing internal union charges that he was a ghost payroller at the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union. Following the charge, he resigned as an employee of the union, where he was paid $35,000 a year from 1990 to 1996.

A federal monitor hired to ferret out union corruption said in a report last year that Duff "performed no meaningful service for the (union) for a substantial period of his employment" and that Duff "knowingly associated with" associates of organized crime.

Federal authorities are investigating whether John Duff III's alleged ghost payrolling represented an embezzlement of hotel union funds, according to federal sources.

The alleged conflict between the Duffs' business and Local 3 was detailed as far back as 1990, in a federal lawsuit filed by James Williams, a former employee at Romano Brothers Beverage and onetime member of Local 3.

"(The union leaders) were in bed together with the company, saving the company a tremendous amount of money in insurance and overtime wages," Williams said in a recent interview.

The lawsuit also questioned the role of Windy City Labor's president, Patricia Green, who is married to John Duff Jr. The lawsuit alleged that Green used her maiden name to hide the interests of her sons, Patrick and John III, who allegedly ran the company.

Williams alleged in his lawsuit that the union failed to adequately represent him in a grievance against Romano Brothers, citing the Duffs' business dealings with Romano as an example of an ongoing conflict of interest. A federal judge dismissed the case, ruling that the alleged conflict had no bearing on his dispute with the company.

Told about the Duffs' business and union dealings, Mark Spognardi, an attorney at McBride Baker & Coles specializing in labor law, said, "If Windy City is controlled by union officials, it's doing the exact opposite of what good unionism is. It would be like a doctor selling cigarettes."

Officials at Judge & Dolph, Romano Brothers and Pacific Wine and Spirits didn't return calls. An official at Union Beverage declined to comment.

Mayor in sand trap over long-planned Duff-Daley golf outing

Hey Chicago, grab your golf bags. There's a big party coming up. And you won't want to miss it.

The Men of the Year labor union golf outing is scheduled for Sept. 10 at the Bloomingdale Golf Club. It will honor two of Chicago's prominent families—who now pretend they don't know each other.

The Daleys and the Duffs.

Daley spent all last week screeching that he doesn't know the Duffs. Now, it turns out, this party has been planned for weeks.

I've never golfed in my life, but I'm going. I've got an invitation, and the event has been confirmed by the golf club and sponsoring unions.

Guess who the Men of the Year are this year?

Mayor Richard Daley's little brother, John Daley, the Cook County Commissioner. And Pat Duff, president of Distillery Workers Local No. 3.

Just imagine John Daley, the son-in-law of the late Loop gambling boss Louie Briatta, standing next to Pat Duff, whose family members boast of ties to mobsters like Rocco Infelice, the late Fifi Buccieri and the extremely late Big Tuna.

I sure hope they're joking about those "shot-gun tee-offs."

"Oh God, you know about the Duff-Daley golf outing?" a top labor guy asked me while the mayor was denying he knows the Duffs. "Great timing, isn't it?"

I asked whether union bosses would dare plan the event honoring John Daley and Pat Duff without first getting approval from Little Big Man himself.

"Of course not. But this was before that stuff about the Duffs and the mayor hit in your paper," the labor official said. "If they go ahead with it, it'll look stupid. If they cancel it, they'll look like they're hiding something. You're enjoying this, right?"

Me? Oh, no.

Mayor Daley should show up to support his brother. And U.S. Commerce Secretary William Daley, who also knows the Duffs, should play too.

Daley made sure his pals the Duffs wet their beaks with $100 million of your money in kinky city contracts that were given to phony minority front companies. Now the mayor says he doesn't know them.

"I don't know them personally. I don't," Daley said as he laughed off the Tribune investigation during a radio interview. "I know a lot of people as mayor, just walking into this room, I met five, six people."

Hey, Rich, you might want to change your story.

The Daley-Duff golf outing is being put on by the Greater Chicago and Vicinity Port Council Maritime Trades. The organization is run by John Phelan, also the boss of the building engineers. I called Phelan's office to ask if I could sponsor a few holes.

"That would be nice," said a woman on the phone. "We'll have somebody call you on Monday morning. What's your name again?"

While we're waiting for the call, why don't we dream up sponsorships just for fantasy's sake—to make the Daley-Duff golf outing a memorable event.

We can name the first hole after mob boss Joey "The Clown" Lombardo and hire a few real clowns to make with the jokes. Christy "The Nose" Spina—the city's Department of Tony foreman and the Clown's chauffeur—can hand out fake Cuban cigars, like he did at his wedding.

And what about another hole, "The Grzyb Grabber" for the guy who handles all the city contracts, City Purchasing Agent Al Grzyb. He can stand there with his good friend, former Streets and San boss Eileen Carey.

If you get a hole in one, Grzyb will deliver a smashed-up black city Caprice to your door by 7 a.m. the next day. But the contract for the city car will disappear, just like the Duffs' contracts.

Lawyer Sam Banks and his brother, Ald. William Banks (36th), could host another hole, serving prosciutto and provolone sandwiches. But don't worry about leaving a mess on the putting green. Sam will have a dozen judges on their hands and knees, picking up the crumbs.

Another hole could be "The Bill Hanhardt Hole," for the former chief of detectives now under investigation by the feds. If you keep expensive jewelry in your golf bags, your stuff will disappear. Later, you can ask the clowns about your missing diamonds.

No big golf outing would be complete without a few hours of big gambling after the big dinner.

Imagine Department of Tony deputy commissioner Nello Sabatini, mayoral counselor Tim Degnan, James "Skinny" Sheahan—brother of Cook County Sheriff Mike Sheahan—and Tony Pucillo himself running the card tables and dice games for us.

You might even hear Al Grzyb or trucking boss Mike Tadin shout, "Baby needs a new pair of shoes." If you're lucky, you can haul your winnings home in a Waste Management Blue Bag.

For further information on the golf outing, call the Maritime Trades at 312-372-1466. But hurry; you've only got until Aug. 15 to make reservations. Don't forget your cameras.

The worst that could happen is they get shy and cancel. But mayoral strategist Jeremiah Joyce could reschedule the event in discreet O'Brien, Mich.—a quiet town known to most people as New Buffalo.

Fore!

Mayor huffs and bluffs over guff about Duffs

To all you duffers out there, I've got some sad news to report about some high-profile political "links."

Mayor Richard Daley said Wednesday that he will not, repeat, will not attend the big upcoming labor union golf outing to honor the Daleys and the Duffs.

We were hoping he'd show up and put his arm around the Duffs' shoulders—just as he does at the Duffs' wild Christmas parties at the Como Inn and at fundraisers.

Now he hardly knows them. The Duffs are mere acquaintances who just happened to get $100 million in city contracts that were supposed to go to minorities and women—not clout-heavy white guys.

"I only go to one golf outing, the Valentine Boys and Girls Club. That's all I go to, one a year," Daley told reporters, saying he wasn't attending the Duff-Daley outing. "I get invited to 300 golf outings a year. . . . I don't go. I bike ride on Mondays. I don't go to golf outings. I stopped it a number of years ago—about 6 or 7 years ago. I bike on Mondays. I go to one (golf outing). I go every year. This year I am playing with my daughter. I think she will beat me, too."

He said he can't attend because he's biking on Mondays. But the Daley-Duff golf outing is on Friday Sept. 10. Mayor, please get a new calendar. The mayor's brother, Cook County Commissioner John Daley, and liquor workers union boss Pat Duff are the honorees at the union bash at the Bloomingdale Golf Club.

As for that Valentine Boys and Girls Club golf outing? It's sponsored by Mike Tadin, the Marina Cartage trucking boss who gets millions and millions from the city and gave former Ald. Patrick Huels (11th) that $1.2 million "loan."

Tadin is another close friend of the mayor's who's gorged himself at the public trough.

Daley was also aggravated Wednesday by questions on the wiseguy issue. Some of the Duffs have clean police records. But others boast of their friendship to organized crime bosses. Reporters were asking the usual question: How could he give $100 million in city business to people who have ties to big-time Mafia chiefs?

"Don't ask me," he said. "I am the mayor of the city of Chicago."

He was truly edgy about the golf outing. So he mentioned Misericordia Heart of Mercy, which is supposed to get a donation after expenses from the Daley-Duff golf outing.

Misericordia is a great organization that helps developmentally disabled children and adults. The group is always in need of money to help people. But the mayor used those children as a political shield to cover his alliance with the Duffs.

"My brother is very honored and pleased that the proceeds go to the Misericordia. Misericordia is a home for children and adults who are retarded. . . . If you don't like that, so what. . . . What's wrong with that?" he asked.

In other words, you question the golf outing, you question the children at Misericordia. What a disgustingly cheap political trick.

The Daley-Duff golf tickets, including lunch, cost $55. The invitation says any "profits" will go to Misericordia, after expenses. And the unions and golf club declined to return repeated phone calls about expenses.

"Golf costs about $40 per person, not including 8 bucks for lunch and prizes," said a friend who understands fundraisers and golf outings. "So what will Misericordia get? 19 cents?"

Now that the mayor decided to use Misericordia to excuse the Daley-Duff golf fest, you should know what his City Hall did to Misericordia a few weeks ago.

Daley's Law Department made a ruling that cost the children at Misericordia some real charity money—in the $100,000 range.

City Hall lawyers stopped a decades-long tradition at city firehouses. It was a great tradition to help disabled kids. And you didn't need golf clubs or political connections or wiseguy friends.

All you needed was a heart.

Once a year, firefighters would fan out in the neighborhoods and hold a "fill the hat" day for Misericordia. They'd also hold a "fill the boot" day for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Last August, Chicago firefighters raised $76,000 for the MDA in an afternoon. They raised a similar amount for Misericordia too. No more.

"This is the closest thing to a job action our guys will come to," said a furious Bill Kugelman, president of the Chicago Fire Fighters Union. "The city doesn't care about disabled kids, but your average Chicago firefighter does."

So City Hall doesn't want firefighters in a charity drive. But it's OK to run a $100 million charity for the Duffs.

And Daley thinks it's OK to use Misericordia as a public relations cover for his political associations with the Duffs.

If you'd like to donate to Misericordia—without honoring City Hall's kinky politics—you can send a check to Misericordia Heart of Mercy, 6300 N. Ridge Ave., Chicago, IL, 60660.

The kids at Misericordia don't care if you have clout.

[REDACTED] This fraud took advantage of Chicago affirmative action policies which require contractors to share a portion of their city work with firms owned exclusively by women or racial minorities. The article stated that Windy City Maintenance takes in approximately $13,000,000.00 in city contracts per anum and has had a relationship with the city since 1990. Also, the article alleges that sources have advised the Chicago Tribune that in 1995 [REDACTED]

Details: The above captioned case was predicated from newspaper articles which appeared in the Chicago Tribune. These articles alleged a conflict of interest existed where Windy City Labor Service, a company owned/operated by the Duff's, regularly provided daily, non-union day laborers to companies that had collective bargaining agreements with Local 3 to supply union workers. The company's named were Romano Brothers Beverage, Pacific Wine and Spirits, and Union Beverage.

On paper, Windy City Labor Service (WCLS) is owned by [redacted] The Tribune articles, however, allege that [redacted] really run the daily operations of WCLS. [redacted]

Summary of Evidence

To date no subpoena's have been served regarding the investigation.

Proving Case

In order to prove the allegations of the above captioned case, the following companies/organizations need to be subpoenaed:

1. Local 3's collective bargaining agreement with Romano Brothers Beverage, Pacific Wine and Spirits, and Union Beverage for the period 1996 to the present.
2. List of day laborers provided by Windy City Labor Service to Romano Brothers Beverage, Pacific Wine and Spirits, and Union Beverage for the period 1996 to the present.
3. Contracts between Romano Brothers Beverage, Pacific Wine and Spirits, Union Beverage and Windy City Labor Service.

Also, interviews of [redacted] and others not yet identified who were employed by Local 3 as well as day laborers who worked for Windy City Labor Service should be conducted. Identify [redacted] and interview those individuals.

There were several other allegations mentioned in the above captioned articles that warrant further investigation.

The article alleged [redacted] has been represented to the city of Chicago as [redacted] of Windy City Maintenance (WCM), when in actuality, the company was [redacted]. This fraud took advantage of Chicago's affirmative action policies which require contractors to share a portion of their city work with firms owned exclusively by women or racial minorities. The article stated that WCM takes in approximately $13,000,000.00 in city contracts per annum and has had a relationship with the city since 1990. Also, the article alleges that sources have advised the Chicago Tribune that in 1995, [redacted] was paid a salary [redacted] received $346,000.00 and [redacted]. A year later, [redacted]. The article also quotes various sources as stating [redacted] has very little to do with the business, and that the business is actually run by [redacted].

Minority deals face new review

By Gary Washburn
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITER

In what appeared to be a pre-emptive move to blunt criticism of lucrative city contracts awarded to controversial companies with ties to Mayor Richard Daley, the mayor Wednesday unveiled plans to beef up scrutiny of firms that get favored treatment by claiming to be owned by women or minorities.

The announcement came as mayoral aides prepared to release results of an internal probe into two city contractors—one purportedly operated by a woman, the other by an African-American—that the Tribune reported earlier this year were controlled by the white male members of the politically connected and mob-linked Duff family.

Daley and other officials who spoke at a City Hall news conference where the new initiative was announced declined to comment on the Duff investigation, which has been under way since the Tribune report in July.

The mayor would say only that a report will be issued "very shortly."

But when asked about "front" companies that wrongfully reap the rewards of the city's affirmative action programs, Daley acknowledged problems.

"There always have been difficulties," he said, adding that the state and federal governments and the private sector have had similar troubles. "I always amend and change things. Any problems ... we are going to correct."

In a 1997 attempt to amend things on another issue, Daley rolled out sweeping ethics and public disclosure measures after the discovery that his City Council floor leader, Ald. Patrick Huelts (11th), had accepted a business loan from a contractor whom he had helped win a city grant.

Daley said Wednesday he is moving a Purchasing Department official who had been responsible for certifying companies as minority- or woman-owned to a new post to recruit such firms to do business with the city.

Daley and other officials in the past have denied steering business to Windy City Maintenance, a janitorial firm purportedly operated by a female member of the Duff family, or Remedial Environmental Manpower, a firm supposedly controlled by an African-American man that has gotten a lucrative subcontract on the city's Blue Bag recycling program.

The patriarch of the Duff family is John Duff Jr., a former union boss with ties to organized crime. Two of his sons, one of them with his own alleged ties to the mob, also have been active in family businesses, the Tribune investigation found.

Members of the Duff family and enterprises they control have contributed more than $30,000 to Daley's political coffers, and the Duffs hosted at least two Daley fundraisers, including a breakfast last February attended by the mayor.

The Duffs also have provided Election Day workers for Daley-backed candidates.

Providing city contracts for minority- and woman-owned companies is a cornerstone of Daley's affirmative action program, and any hint of irregularities brings with it the threat of political damage, especially in the African-American community.

Daley's personal ties to the Duffs make the Windy City and Remedial Environmental Manpower contracts particularly sensitive.

The new monitoring effort is designed to "ensure consistency," the mayor said.

It will be headed by Nancy Clawson, currently chief financial officer of the city's Aviation Department.

Eric McMiller, now a Budget Department official, will have responsibility to certify new companies as minority- or woman-owned.

"I have asked Eric to review the documentation we now require of companies with an eye toward clarifying any ambiguous disclosure requirements," Daley said.

Currently, after a firm wins certification, its only requirement is to file annual affidavits to ensure that ownership and other aspects of the business have not changed.

"That's the process used by most other cities, but we feel it should be strengthened," Daley said. "So we are modifying the process to require a rigorous review every two years."

The review "will include more extensive documentation, site visits and interviews with officers of the firm, their clients and other contacts."

Troy Ratliff, a senior Purchasing Department official—who until Wednesday's news conference had been in charge of certifying minority- and woman-owned companies—said the monitoring process "has to be more than a document review. There have to be on-site visits, conversations with people in the industry. A lot of information comes from the competition out there."

Officials said plans also call for more extensive monitoring of city contracts that require at least 50 percent of the workers on the job be Chicago residents.

"The kind of enforcement they are talking about would prevent [Duff-type contracts] from reoccurring in this city's history," said Ald. Freddrenna Lyle (6th). One front company "is too many," she said.

"That means some qualified person didn't get the business."

Daley's announcement came with the unveiling of a separate program designed to nurture and recruit firms owned by women and minorities—particularly African-Americans—to do business with the city.

Daley appointed city Treasurer Barbara Lumpkin to head a task force that will determine the best ways to bring in new firms. Ratliff will implement the task force's recommendations.

Administration officials say the city routinely surpasses its annual goal of providing 5 percent of all contracts to woman-owned firms and 25 percent to companies owned by minorities.

But several black aldermen, including Lyle, complained during fall City Council budget hearings that African-American contractors are receiving far too small a portion of the minority total.

Only 9 percent of $1.3 billion in pacts awarded by the city through September had gone to black-owned firms.

"That is a concern we have," Daley said. "I think the pool [of contractors] has to be expanded in some way."

There is a perception among many African-American small-business people "that it is so much trouble to get certified, it is not worth the effort," Lyle said.

"Also, historically, the city has paid very slowly on vouchers, and many people don't think they have the wherewithal to maintain overhead expenses waiting for the city to pay."

Difficulty in obtaining required performance bonds has been a problem, particularly for African-American construction firms, Lyle said.

"Some businesses may not know how to get certified," Daley said. "Others may need help in building a company that is able to do the specialized work we sometimes require."

Lumpkin's task force will make its recommendations in 90 days, Daley said.

Woman not owner, study confirms

By Andrew Martin
and Laurie Cohen
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

After a five-month investigation, city of Chicago officials on Friday announced that a politically connected janitorial company that has reaped tens of millions of dollars as a woman-owned business is actually run by men.

Because of those findings, Corporation Counsel Mara Georges said Windy City Maintenance has been decertified as a woman-owned business enterprise, a designation that allows companies to cash in on policies mandating that women and minorities receive a chunk of city business.

The decision promises to cost Windy City at least $1 million a year in city contracts and could jeopardize up to $4.8 million a year that the firm is eligible for as a subcontractor on city projects.

Mayor Richard M. Daley ordered the probe in the wake of a Tribune investigation that disclosed that Windy City Maintenance was actually controlled by John F. Duff Jr. and his sons. They have held fundraisers for the mayor and provided campaign workers for Daley-backed candidates. The elder Duff and one of his sons also have been linked to organized crime figures.

The Tribune investigation also raised questions about a second company tied to the Duffs, Remedial Environmental Manpower, that is listed in city documents as being owned and operated by William Stratton, an African-American man. On more than one occasion over several years, city staffers had balked at Remedial Environmental Manpower's minority-owned certification, saying that the company not only shared office space with other Duff-owned companies but also appeared to be controlled by James Duff, a son of John Duff Jr.

On Friday, however, Georges said the city concluded that Remedial Environmental Manpower, which provides workers to sort garbage for the city's blue bag recycling program, is in fact owned and operated by Stratton.

After the news conference, neither the Duffs nor their attorney could be reached for comment.

Daley did not attend Friday's Duff briefing but was asked to comment later at a news conference at McCormick Place, which he called to tout the city's gala millennium celebration.

"Not today, I can't," Daley responded. "... I think appropriately I'll be answering all those questions in the next week. There's enough time to digest the summary and the report."

The city's probe into the Duffs was particularly sensitive for Daley because of the family's mob ties and its alleged abuse of female and minority set-aside rules.

Daley waited to release the findings until the day before a major holiday when most people were consumed by news of potential Y2K computer troubles and millennium celebrations.

Despite the city's findings that Windy City is now run by men, Georges said the firm was indeed owned and controlled by a woman named Patricia Green when it initially applied for certification as a woman-owned business in 1991. And Georges said no evidence was found that the firm had lied on paperwork filed with the city since then to obtain annual recertification.

But records show that as recently as May, the company stated in its annual recertification application that Green—who is the wife of John Duff Jr. and whose married name is Patricia Green Duff—owned Windy City Maintenance and controlled it on a day-to-day basis. Patricia Green is her maiden name.

Asked to explain the apparent contradiction, Georges said she found no evidence of fraud because company officials "believe" that the firm fits the definition of a woman-owned business even if others disagree.

"There is no evidence of an affirmative action by them to engage in deception," Georges said. "... They would say Patricia Green is still consulted on all matters."

Nevertheless, the automated telephone directory that connects callers to Windy City with employees of the firm includes no listing for either a Patricia Green or a Patricia Green Duff.

Under city law, a firm that fraudulently claims to be owned by a woman or minority could be barred for three years from receiving more city business.

Georges said the investigation is over and that Windy City would not be fined or punished in any other way. However, she said the city's inspector general is looking into Windy City, though she did not elaborate. Inspector General Alexander Vroustouris could not be reached for comment.

Georges said Green ran the company when it initially applied for woman-owned certification in 1991 but eventually she ceded control in part because of health problems. Georges said the transfer of control was an "evolving process" and that the investigation did not pinpoint when Green stopped running Windy City Maintenance.

During the investigation, Windy City Maintenance notified the city that it would voluntarily withdraw its application as a woman-owned business, Georges said. That's because the company obtained financial records that showed its annual revenue from both city and other contracts exceeded $17 million—putting it over the financial threshold to be eligible for woman-owned business perks, Georges explained.

Sometime after that, Georges said, the city determined on its own that Green no longer controlled the company and decided to decertify the company as a woman-owned business.

Georges said the city did not determine problems with Windy City Maintenance's status sooner because of flaws in the annual process under which companies are recertified as woman- or minority-owned. On Wednesday, the city said it would beef up those procedures, which essentially had allowed such companies to operate on the honor system.

Being designated a woman- or minority-owned business gives companies an important advantage. Under the city's affirmative action policies, 25 percent of city work is supposed to be awarded to firms owned by minorities and 5 percent is supposed to go to woman-owned firms; as a result, city contractors scramble to hire these firms as subcontractors.

The immediate impact of Windy City decertification is the loss of $1 million in janitorial contracts at the 911 Center on the Near West Side and another at the Calumet Area police headquarters.

Windy City also could lose two lucrative jobs where the company is listed as a woman-owned subcontractor—a $1.8 million-a-year janitorial subcontract at the Harold Washington Library and a $3 million-a-year cleaning job at the International Terminal at O'Hare International Airport, Georges said.

Neither the city contractor who maintains the library nor the contractor who manages the International Terminal could be located for comment Friday.

Windy City also holds an even more lucrative contract worth about $9 million a year with the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, a city-state agency that runs Navy Pier and McCormick Place. On Friday, a spokesman for the authority said that it would review the city's findings and take steps to ensure that Windy City fulfills requirements for agency business that is set aside for women-owned firms.

The city's Duff inquiry was conducted by four city lawyers who worked part-time on the inquiry and who conducted "more than 29 interviews, at least four site visits and a complete review of files, financial documents, contractors and other pertinent records," according to a press release issued by the city. The attorneys interviewed Windy City workers, city employees and vendors who have worked with the company, Georges said.

City admits it did not check on female or black ownership before recertifying contracts

By Ray Gibson
and Laurie Cohen
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

City officials granted billions of dollars in special contracts reserved for minorities to firms that said they were run by women and minorities without checking whether the businesses had changed management after being approved for the program, Daley administration officials acknowledge.

When firms receiving lucrative city contracts under the controversial minority set-aside program applied for their required annual recertification, Chicago officials routinely did not visit them to determine who controlled the companies. Nor, by and large, did officials check references provided by the firms.

Instead, city officials overseeing the recertification process have relied mainly on the firms' word as to who owned and controlled them. Such firms received billions of dollars in city business during the past 15 years, and at least $388 million, in city contracts in the first nine months of 1999 alone, according to city figures.

City officials say their hands-off arrangement ended abruptly last week when they announced an overhaul of the recertification process. The reform plan was made public after aides to Mayor Richard Daley learned that a five-month city Law Department investigation into Windy City Maintenance would be embarrassing.

For eight years, Windy City, a politically connected company with ties to Daley, reaped tens of millions of dollars in city janitorial business by asserting that it was run by an experienced businesswoman, Patricia Green.

On Friday, the city's top lawyer said the Law Department's lengthy investigation showed it wasn't. Windy City and two other firms run by the mob-linked Duff family have won $100 million of government contracts during Daley's time in office.

Daley ordered the Law Department's investigation after the Tribune reported that Windy City in fact was run by Green's husband, John Duff Jr., and their sons.

The Duff family and organizations they control have contributed thousands of dollars to the mayor's campaign fund and have provided campaign workers for Daley-supported candidates. The elder Duff and one of his sons have ties to organized-crime figures.

Last Wednesday, Daley aides announced that officials would be more vigilant in confirming information supplied by companies seeking their required annual recertification.

Controversy over the so-called minority set-aside program that assists companies in landing city contracts goes back at least three mayoral administrations. Mayor Harold Washington formalized and expanded what had been an informal set-aside program in 1985 after African-Americans said they were not getting their fair share of city business.

Under current city law, contractors who vie for city work must redirect 25 percent of the dollars they are paid by the city to firms owned by minorities and 5 percent to enterprises owned by women. Once a firm owned by minorities or women has $17 million in annual revenues from all its business, it is deemed too large for the program and considered capable of competing for business on its own with no additional city assistance.

Much of the debate over the program centers on whether many women and minorities listed as owners of such firms are merely fronts installed by others to take advantage of the city's largess.

In the past, even the mildest attempt by the city to crack down on sham companies has led to howls from vendors complaining that they were being buried in a blizzard of expensive and time-consuming paperwork.

The Chicago area's biggest construction firms also dearly want to see the program abolished.

In a 1996 lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court, a construction industry trade group asked that the programs be ruled discriminatory and tossed out. That suit is still pending.

Twice in the past two decades, federal prosecutors have used the city set-aside program in their stings on City Hall.

When officials in the Washington administration came under scrutiny in the mid-1980s, an undercover mole working for prosecutors helped set up a firm owned by two African-Americans to gain a lucrative parking-ticket collection contract for a white-owned company.

In the more recent Operation

Silver Shovel sting on City Hall, Ald. Ambrosio Medrano pleaded guilty in January 1996 to accepting bribes from John Christopher, a corrupt trash hauler who was cooperating with the FBI. The bribes bought Medrano's assistance in helping Christopher win City Hall approval of a sham minority-owned business.

For more than a decade, there have been numerous published accounts of other shady deals. They included a company owner selling 51 percent of his company's stock to a female secretary, a low-level minority employee promoted to president of a firm and a $10 million plumbing company long owned by a man suddenly listed on city records as being owned by a woman.

On Wednesday, city officials announced they would begin more rigorously scrutinizing firms that had won City Hall approval as minority- or women-owned businesses.

Every two years, the firms will be required to provide more extensive documentation to prove their status. City officials also will conduct site visits and interviews with clients and others.

Despite the acknowledged problems with checking up on firms already doing business with the city, officials long have insisted they vigorously screen applicants when they first apply for the special minority set-aside status.

"We are by reputation fairly onerous in this process," rejecting about 20 percent of the applicants, Purchasing Department official Troy Ratliff said in an interview last summer. Until he was shifted to another job last week, Ratliff was in charge of the certification process.

For a firm to be certified by the city, Ratliff said, a minority or female applicant must be not just technically the owner of a company, but also must control its day-to-day operation.

In the case of Windy City, Corporation Counsel Mara Georges announced Friday that the city investigation had concluded that Patricia Green, the woman who claimed to be running the company, was not in control of the corporation even though she owned 100 percent of the firm's stock. Instead, Georges said, the city investigation found it was run by men.

Because Green no longer controlled the firm, the city decided to decertify it, Georges said.

City officials said Friday that decertification was extremely rare, but they could not cite the numbers of firms that had suffered that fate.

"As a result of its decertification, Windy City will lose at least $1 million a year in city business and could face the loss of an additional $4.8 million annually in city business that it receives from other companies as a subcontractor."

Since 1991, when Windy City first obtained its status as a certified woman-owned business, the city's process for obtaining required annual recertification has been scaled back because of limited staff, city officials said Friday.

The city now relies only on an affidavit from the company owner noting whether there was a change in the control of the firm. The firms are also required to file financial statements, tax returns and other documentation.

But none of those documents necessarily show whether the owner is still actively running the business. And the city does not routinely follow up to verify the information, officials acknowledged.

Nonetheless, Georges said Friday that the certification process involving Windy City wasn't flawed and that Green was running the company in 1991 when the firm first became certified by the city as being owned by a woman.

But the Tribune found that the city's initial investigation into Windy City's qualifications as a woman-owned business was far from rigorous.

For example, city documents suggest that a city staffer gave advance notice of her site visit to the firm. City officials didn't request a detailed résumé for Patricia Green or contact references for the firm until after a competitor said that Windy City wasn't truly operated by a woman.

While Georges defended the original decision to grant Windy City woman-owned status, she acknowledged problems with the way the city carried out the firm's annual recertification process more recently.

Because of the new reforms, Georges said, "a problem like this will be detected in the future."

Georges said Friday the investigation didn't pinpoint when Patricia Green gave up control of the company, but it concluded that at some point she had turned over the duties of running the company to her son, James, and another man.

City officials suggested that the set-aside program cannot be judged by the results of their investigation in the Windy City case.

Reno needs to send in the feds—that's F-E-D-S, mayor

United States Atty. Gen. Janet Reno
G-Building
Washington, D.C.

Happy New Year, Jan!
It's been a few months since I dropped you a line.
Back then I asked you to investigate the juicy political cleaning contracts coming out of Mayor Richard Daley's City Hall. Jan, you didn't respond.

It's about Daley's pals, the Duffs. They're white guys, but, miraculously, they got $100 million in contracts set aside for women and minorities. Amazing, right?

What's more amazing is that Daley defends them, even though the Duffs brag about their friendships with imprisoned-but-still-active Outfit boss Rocco Infelice and the late boss supremo Anthony Accardo. The Duffs were investigated in Florida—your home state, Jan—for allegedly running a gambling operation under the protection of the Gambino crime family.

Since Democrats make such a big deal about protecting affirmative action programs, I thought your boss would be interested in how minority set-aside programs were perverted in Chicago.

Imagine, Jan, what would happen if a prominent Republican—say, New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani—ever played games with minority contracts for white-guy pals with wiseguy connections?

Jan? You think your fed lawyers and the FBI would be interested then? Jan?

There's something else.
The mayor is angry at me. Not only that, but he thinks I can't spell, which really hurts my feelings.

But first—the investigation.

According to a front-
Tribune, City Hall has spent billions of dollars on so-called "minority" contracts during the past 15 years—without ever checking to see if the businesses were sold to politically connected white guys once the contracts were approved.

Guess who pays for all that spending? If you said the average homeowner and shopkeeper, you're right. See, they don't have tax lawyers with connections to the assessor's office.

So, Jan, here goes. Can you send us some of your Washington feds? Our local fed, U.S. Atty.
Scotty Lassar, is too busy entrapping chump minority aldermen. It's not fair that minorities go to prison while well-connected white guys get fat from all the city gravy.

Daley is extremely touchy. He didn't need the Duffs and their pals. But he got caught and now he's embarrassed.

That's why he held that lame dog-and-pony-

He waited until New Year's Eve to release the city's investigation on the Duffs. It showed that one company supposedly run by a woman was actually run by men. But Daley's government said that wasn't fraud. Go figure.

Daley didn't even show up. He refused to comment about it later, on New Year's Eve. He tried to bury the smell.

But he was full of angry talk earlier in the day, when somebody asked him about my Thursday column. It was about his lame Wednesday news conference, where he promised to give African-Americans more city contracts. After the Wednesday conference, I walked out of his office. There was Ernie Kumerow, the former boss of Laborers Union Local 1001. Ernie is also the son-in-law of the late Tony Accardo.

Ernie said he was going inside to meet with Daley, and since he was walking into Daley's office, I put his quotes in my column and walked the other way. Daley's people didn't bother complaining to me Thursday, when I talked to them.

But on Friday, the mayor said it was a lie. He even spelled it, probably thinking that everybody has trouble with big words.

"That's a complete lie. . . . L-I-E. Lie," said Daley, making with the spelling insult. "Lie! Put it down and tell the person. That is a complete fabrication and lie."

"I didn't work yesterday!" Daley said, explaining that he couldn't have met Kumerow on Thursday—even though Kumerow was at City Hall on Wednesday. "I didn't have breakfast, lunch or dinner and I didn't have a social."

You know something? Kumerow could have been pulling my leg about his meeting. And Daley sure was adamant about not having breakfast, lunch or dinner Thursday.

But he didn't say anything about Wednesday tea. That's T-E-A. Tea! Imagine them sipping a Ceylonese blend, nibbling on "elevenuses," as the mayor's British friends like to say.

"Hey, Rich, these cucumber sammiches are great! Old Joe Batters loved cucumbers, you know."

"You like 'em, Ern? I cut the crusts, slap on the butter, then roll 'em in chives. Sammy Banks gimme this recipe. Good, eh?"

"Yeah," says Ernie, "Mare, you proved you don't need sauce to eat good."

"Wait till you try my scones. Maron! They're my mayoral specialty. Bada-bing-bada-boom!"

That's all for now, Jan. Please send those G-men before the next property-tax bill is sent out, OK?

Your friend,

Insurance carriers sometimes perform preliminary audits to verify the payroll totals and employee classifications provided by the insured company (and thus verify that the proper premium is being paid). In September of 1998, [REDACTED] attempted to conduct a preliminary audit of Windy City Labor on behalf of Kemper Insurance. [REDACTED] was told to meet [REDACTED] of Windy City Labor at 1024 West Kinzie; this address was different than the address reflected on the policy which was 174-178 North Halsted. (1024 West Kinzie was also the address provided by Windy City Labor on their supplemental application to the NCCI as the address of Hutchinson Trading, one of their clients with whom they supposedly had no common ownership.) [REDACTED] was shown a computer generated payroll that placed almost all of the payroll under the clerical classification. When he asked for the names and phone numbers of clients, he was told that they were not available at that time. [REDACTED] later repeatedly attempted to contact [REDACTED] at Windy City Labor, but his messages were never returned. [REDACTED] also called [REDACTED] for assistance in obtaining the required information from Windy City Labor, but no further information was provided.

Kemper Insurance continued to provide Windy City Labor with insurance coverage through the required date of July 5, 1999, but informed the NCCI of Windy City Labor's failure to cooperate with Kemper's preliminary audit request in 1998. The NCCI would not allow the renewal of Windy City Labor's coverage due to this failure to cooperate. On July 1, 1999, [REDACTED] called [REDACTED] and asked him to tell the NCCI that Windy City Labor was now willing to cooperate. [REDACTED] also received a call that same day from [REDACTED] with the same request. [REDACTED] told both [REDACTED] that Kemper would consider providing a renewal of coverage to Windy City Labor if they immediately provided documents which included a client list and proof of payroll. Neither [REDACTED] ever provided such documentation to [REDACTED] and coverage by Kemper ended on July 5, 1999.

It is the insurance carrier's normal practice to conduct a final audit at the end of the annual policy period to verify the total payroll and that the proper classifications of employees were used. The total policy premium is then determined and any adjustments from the initial estimated premium that was paid at the beginning of the policy can be made. An auditor representing Kemper attempted to conduct a final audit of Windy City Labor after the policy was not renewed. [REDACTED] canceled an appointment with the auditor that had been made for July 21, 1999, because the records were supposedly not ready. A later appointment was also canceled and no final audit was ever allowed by Windy City Labor.

After attempts to conduct a final audit were not successful, [REDACTED] attempted to call several of the clients from the list provided by Windy City Labor in July, 1998. Client interviews are frequently used by the insurance carrier to independently verify the total payroll and verify the type of work handled by employees. [REDACTED] called several of the companies, including Curtis Storage and Romano Brothers, but no representative of the companies would speak to him and none of his messages were ever returned.

[REDACTED] also called [REDACTED] [REDACTED] had previously called Kemper to report that he thought Windy City Labor was hiding their warehouse payroll under a clerical classification. [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that he had been approached by [REDACTED] in February, 1999, and asked to provide coverage for Windy City Labor; at this time, most of the payroll was classified as clerical. In July, 1999, [REDACTED] was again contacted by

[redacted] but at this time most of the payroll was classified as warehouse. [redacted] thought this was suspicious and thought that the reclassification was done in order to make the account more desirable as the premiums would be more expensive under a mostly warehouse classification.

[redacted] suspicions regarding Windy City Labor led him to search the Internet for articles in the Chicago Tribune concerning Windy City Labor. Through these articles, [redacted] learned that [redacted] is actually [redacted]

[redacted] further doubted the clerical classification of most of Windy City Labor's employees when he read in the Tribune that Windy City Labor is a day labor company that often hires the homeless to handle their work.

[redacted] examined some of the worker compensation claims filed on behalf of employees of Windy City Labor and noted the following: On [redacted] was injured while working as a [redacted] when he

[redacted] during a delivery. On [redacted] was injured while working at [redacted] when he slipped and fell on [redacted] On [redacted] was injured while working with the [redacted]

[redacted] further noted that Judge and Dolph, Romano Brothers, and Pacific Wines had all been mentioned in the Tribune article as liquor distributors who had allegedly been supplied with nonunion workers through Windy City Labor even though the Duff family also runs the Liquor and Wine Sale Representatives, Tire, Plastic, and Allied Workers Union, Local 3.

b7C

[redacted] belief that Windy City Labor had intentionally misclassified employees as clerical was further reinforced by the fact that Windy City Labor has a workers' compensation experience modifier of 2.78. The experience modifier is used to penalize those companies who have unsafe working environments and reward those that have safe environments. Those companies that have an unsafe workplace in which numerous workers' compensation claims are filed will have a debit experience modifier based upon the number of claims versus the total amount of premium paid. Windy City Labor's experience modifier of 2.78 means that Windy City

Labor is paying workers' compensation insurance at 2.78 times the standard rate. In [REDACTED] opinion, this is a very high modifier and is an indicator of a payroll that has been seriously misclassified for many years.

[REDACTED] can not accurately determine the exact premium which should have been paid by Windy City Labor to Kemper because of Windy City Labor's failure to allow a final audit; however, [REDACTED] opinion is that Windy City Labor should have paid Kemper over $300,000. This estimate is based upon the total payroll and a reclassification of employees using the least expensive warehouse classification.

Windy City Labor's current workers' compensation insurance coverage is provided by AmComp/Pinnacle Benefits of North Palm Beach, Florida.

Corporation Counsel Mara Georges said she assured the U.S. attorney of city cooperation.

Investigators hunt for fraud

TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

The federal government has launched an investigation into possible fraud in the awarding of millions of dollars of city contracts to Windy City Maintenance, a controversial company that portrayed itself as female-owned to qualify for affirmative action business, the city's top lawyer disclosed Wednesday.

Corporation Counsel Mara Georges said representatives of the U.S. attorney's office have begun examining city records related to the Windy City contracts and the company's certification as being owned by a woman in order to receive business reserved for firms run by minorities and women.

A Tribune investigation last year found that Windy City is controlled by male members of the Duff family, a clan with ties to Mayor Richard Daley as well as to organized crime figures.

In an exchange with reporters at City Hall, Georges said she agreed to provide access to the city's Windy City Maintenance documents after being contacted about a week ago by U.S. Atty. Scott Lasar.

"He just called and said they had opened an investigation and asked if we would cooperate," Georges said in response to questions about a possible federal inquiry. "I said, 'Absolutely, we will cooperate, and we will make our files available to you.'"

Although the federal probe into Windy City Maintenance contracts apparently began only recently, sources reported Wednesday that the government has been looking into the Duffs since September when prosecutors subpoenaed records related to a Duff-controlled union that represents liquor industry workers.

Those subpoenas followed a Tribune report in August that a separate day-labor company run by the Duffs was undermining the Duffs' own union by providing cheap, non-union labor to the city's major liquor distributors.

As the issue of set-aside, affirmative action contracts for minority-run firms heated up in the City Council, Ald. Ed Smith (28th) introduced an ordinance at Wednesday's council meeting that would create an independent contract watchdog panel to prevent abuses by alleged minority and female "front" companies.

Ald. Dorothy Tillman (3rd) said African-American aldermen will caucus on Thursday to discuss contracts in general and ways to get more city business for black companies in particular. The council members are angry that African-American firms received only 9 percent of $1.3 billion in city contracts during the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The action came as Daley sought to defuse a growing controversy in the council over the issue of big-money city contracts.

On Monday, Daley acknowledged deficiencies in the city's Purchasing Department and announced reforms, after disclosures by the Tribune of alleged overbilling by G.F. Structures, another controversial contractor with political connections.

Earlier, Daley had promised new procedures to ensure that companies gaining a competitive advantage by being admitted to city affirmative action programs actually are owned by women and minorities.

Georges' disclosure of the federal investigation came in an off-handed manner. She was talking to reporters after Wednesday's council meeting about a court decision involving a city tax when questions turned to Windy City Maintenance.

When asked whether she thought an investigation by law enforcement authorities would help clear the air, she volunteered that "we are sitting down" with federal investigators "and sharing the documents we have."

"I don't know the extent of the U.S. attorney's investigation," Georges told reporters. "All I know is, they are looking at it."

An internal city investigation into the Windy City contract, prompted by the Tribune's disclosures, concluded that the company was controlled by a woman when it first got city business but eventually was taken over by men. There was no evidence of willful wrongdoing, according to administration officials.

As for the federal investigation, Georges said, "I don't think there is any reason for them to find fraud. . . . I think what they will find is a flaw in the system, a problem with our process that we are correcting."

Randall Samborn, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office, declined to comment.

James Streicker, an attorney for the Duff family, said he believes any federal investigation of the Duffs' City Hall business will reach the same conclusion as the city's probe.

"I think they will conclude, as the city did, there was no fraud in Windy City's recertification" as a female-owned business, Streicker said.

Streicker said that Windy City continues to be a female-run business, but he said he does not take issue with the city's decertification of the firm because it surpassed $17 million in sales a year, a threshold at which contractors no longer qualify for special treatment under city rules.

Stepping squarely into the controversy, Rev. Jesse Jackson called last week for a federal probe of the Windy City contract, contending that front companies are taking business that should go to legitimate minority-run firms. The plea came after a joint appearance with Daley at Rainbow/PUSH Coalition headquarters.

Sources said Wednesday that the initial phase of the investigation of the Duffs centered on the Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union, Local 3, which members of the Duff family control.

The union represents workers at the same liquor distributors that were also hiring cheaper non-union labor supplied by the Duff day labor company.

Representatives of the city's largest liquor distributors could not be located for comment on the subpoenas.

Besides its city contract, Windy City Maintenance has a janitorial pact with the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority worth about $9 million a year. The authority, operator of McCormick Place and Navy Pier, has not been contacted by federal authorities, a spokeswoman said Wednesday.

Talking to reporters at Wednesday's council meeting, Ald. Smith said that the Tribune's disclosures about Windy City contained "pretty strong information."

"At some point, somebody has got to bell the cat," he said. "I think it is about that time."

Under Smith's proposal, a seven-member "independent review board" would meet at least three times a year to review newly awarded city contracts, particularly those awarded under affirmative action programs.

The mayor would nominate members of the committee, but the council would have approval authority.

Ald. William Banks (36th), though a Daley administration stalwart, endorsed the idea, albeit tentatively.

"The theory is good," he said. "I am not sure I want to be involved in who gets contracts and who doesn't, but I like the idea of an independent body."

The above captioned case was opened on September 8, 1999. Captioned matter was predicated upon the request of United States Attorney Scott R. Lassar. The request followed several articles published by the Chicago Tribune revealing allegations that the Duff family and their businesses, WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE, WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE, and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (R.E.M.) received approximately $100 million from the city of Chicago through fraudulent means.

SUMMARY OF INVESTIGATION:

Chicago's investigation centers on violation of Title 18, United States Code (USC), Section 1341, In addition, Title 18, USC, Section 1954, In addition, Title 18, USC, Section 1343, In addition, Title 29, USC, Section 1141, In addition, Title 18, USC, Section 664.

The case was intitated to investigate allegations that the Duff's had fraudulently classified their businesses as Woman Business Enterprises when the businesses were allegedly run by [REDACTED]. Further allegations were raised stating a conflict of interest existed where Duff owned companies provided non-union labor to conduct union work at local liquor distributors. These liquor distributors had a collective bargaining agreement with the liquor union which is run by the Duff's.

[redacted] advised that the NATIONAL COUNCIL ON COMPENSATION INSURANCE (NCCI) changed the way that insurance companies participated in the assigned risk pool for worker's compensation insurance in 1995. [redacted] advised that insurance carriers used to have a duty to participate in the assigned risk pool and accept the clients assigned to them by the NCCI. [redacted] advised that all claims and attorney's fees were ultimately billed back to the pool, so the insurance companies all made money. [redacted] advised that the NCCI changed to a bidding process for the assigned risk pool and FREMONT was not selected as one of the carriers to participate based on their bid. [redacted] advised that there are only a small number of carriers that provide assigned risk insurance now.

[REDACTED] stated that the accord correctly stated that CASUALTY INSURANCE "ceased being an assigned risk carrier in Illinois," but incorrectly stated that CASUALTY INSURANCE had refused to provide WCLS with insurance in the last 60 days.

[REDACTED] stated that when CASUALTY INSURANCE ceased participating in the assigned risk pool, she would have sent a letter out to WCLS and her other clients informing them that they were no longer participating in the assigned risk pool. [REDACTED] also stated that WCLS would not have submitted an application for voluntary insurance at that time because carriers in the assigned risk pool do not accept applications outside of the applications that are assigned by the NCCI. [REDACTED] further advised that she was only authorized to underwrite assigned risk policies in 1995, so that she would not have refused anyone voluntary insurance in 1995.

[REDACTED] advised that a recent change in the law limited the circumstances in which insurance carriers could change the classification of employees under worker's compensation insurance. [REDACTED] stated that the law only allowed carriers to change classification of employees based on a "misrepresentation" by the insured or if a new class of employees was hired. [REDACTED] advised that carriers could not change the class code during the policy if the carrier had a mistake in classification or the amount of the premium.

[redacted] was interviewed at his place of employment on 01/11/2000 and telephonically on 01/13/2000. Also present during the 01/11/2000 interview was [redacted]. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agent and the purpose of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] stated that there are generally two types of audits in the insurance industry: mail audits and physical audits. [redacted] stated that a mail audit consists of sending out a questionnaire in the mail for the insured to answer regarding the nature of their business, the number of employees, class codes for employees, and the amount of payroll related to these employees. [redacted] stated a physical audit consists of an auditor from the insurance carrier going out to the insured party's place of business and checking their overall payroll, the breakdown of types of employees under what type of payroll, quarterly payroll filings with the State.

[redacted] related that he was familiar with WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (WCLS) and had [redacted] worker's compensation insurance to WCLS through the worker's compensation assigned risk pool. [redacted] stated that he was aware that WCLS was a company that provided temporary labor.

[REDACTED] explained that this meant confirming that the payroll numbers match the quarterly filings with the state and the amount of payroll per class code. [REDACTED] stated that in providing worker's compensation insurance, carriers really had to take their client's word as to what type of work their employees were doing.

[REDACTED] explained that insurance carriers do not have the resources and manpower to verify what individual employees do within a company they insure. [REDACTED] also stated that insurance rates (premiums) are based more on losses than the class codes assigned to a group of employees or portion of the payroll. [REDACTED] explained that this meant that while a company might benefit initially by characterizing or misrepresenting all of its employees in a class code with a lower rate, thereby creating a lower base premium, they would ultimately pay higher premiums because their losses relative to that premium would be higher. [REDACTED] explained that this in turn would cause the companies experience modifier, which is based on its losses and premiums, to go up. [REDACTED] stated that since the base premium is multiplied by the experience modifier in calculating the final premium price, the insured party would ultimately end up paying higher premiums once their modifier started getting higher. [REDACTED] explained that customers do not always understand or appreciate this and simply want the lower premium when they initially seek worker's compensation insurance.

[REDACTED] stated that customers may also be hoping that they do not have a lot of worker's compensation claims. [REDACTED] stated that the problem with this type of thinking from a financial standpoint is that statistically they will have a certain number of claims and with lower premiums it takes fewer claims to raise your modifier in subsequent years. [REDACTED] explained that this meant that if a company is manipulating their class codes, they are betting on the fact that they won't have injuries. [REDACTED] also stated that this meant that a company manipulating its class codes would benefit from having its employees not file worker's compensation claims when they were injured. [REDACTED] added that the law requires employers to file a claim any time that an employee has a work-related injury, regardless of how serious the injury.

b7C

[REDACTED] related that [REDACTED] auditors do not talk to employees to verify their class codes during audits. [REDACTED] stated that the only time [REDACTED] personnel speak to the employees of an insured party regarding their duties is when they become claimants of work-related injuries. [REDACTED] stated that he also does "claims runs" to look at the history a company has with respect to its worker's compensation claims. [REDACTED] explained that a claims run is a list of the worker's compensation claims made by the employees an insured party. [REDACTED] stated that if an individual employee was categorized as clerical by an insured, but had a warehouse-related worker's compensation claim, then an insurance carrier could change the class code of that individual to warehouse for the purpose of calculating premiums.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] stated that if he had information that a client was providing fraudulent class codes on its employees, he would advise his boss who would have either changed the class codes and raised the premiums or dropped the client altogether. [REDACTED] stated that he was not aware that WCLS might have been fraudulently manipulating their class codes in order to lower their worker's compensation premium with CASUALTY.

premium that a company pays and the losses (worker's compensation claims) paid on that premium. [REDACTED] stated that the NATIONAL COUNCIL ON COMPENSATION INSURANCE (NCCI) is responsible for assigning an experience modifier for each company.

[REDACTED] stated that an experience modifier of 1.0 means that a company's losses relative to their premiums are average or normal for that industry. [REDACTED] stated that an experience modifier lower than 1.0 means that the company's history of losses to premiums is better than average for that industry and an experience modifier higher than 1.0 means that their experience is worse than average in that industry. [REDACTED] stated that the NCCI could be contacted if a company felt that their experience modifier was not calculated correctly by the NCCI.

[REDACTED] stated that he did not recall WCLS ever asking him to challenge or appeal their experience modifier with the NCCI.

[REDACTED] was later shown a letter to the MIDWEST COUNCIL ON COMPENSATION INSURANCE (MCCI), dated May 22, 1992, in which [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] on behalf of WCLS, asked the MCCI to review WCLS "experience modification" for any errors. [REDACTED] stated that he vaguely remembered [REDACTED] doing this, but does not believe that the experience modifier was ever lowered as requested by WCLS.

[REDACTED] stated that the governing class for insurance purposes is the class of employees that develops the most premium. [REDACTED] stated that WCLS would calculate their governing class based on their payroll and that the governing class is not something that would be placed in the Accord he would provide to the NCCI for worker's compensation insurance.

[REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] is the [REDACTED] between WCLS and [REDACTED] stated that he does not have that much contact with the company except to get payroll information from office personnel. [REDACTED] stated that his contact at WCLS is a [REDACTED] in the office. [REDACTED] recognized her name as [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he does not really know WCLS' clients or what WCLS does except to say that he knows that WCLS provides a pool of temporary labor from clerical to warehouse. [REDACTED] stated that he did not know the exact size of WCLS. [REDACTED] recalled that WCLS was a sizable account, but not his biggest account. _____ stated that he knows who _____ is and has talked to him a few times at WCLS, but that _____ normally talks to directly to one another.

_____ stated that most of WCLS' worker's compensation claims or "losses" are faxed _____ stated that he then passes the information on to the carrier. _____ explained that the carrier would then audit WCLS at a later date to check their claims and their payroll.

b6

_____ was provided a copy of a _____ dated _____ given to the NCCI on behalf of WCLS. _____ confirmed that _____ stated that he recognized _____ the WCLS file and reference the figures provided the year before. _____ would then call _____ requesting information on the anticipated payroll and employee class codes for the upcoming year.

_____ indicated that _____ would see these figures before they were sent out. _____ stated that it would normally take a long time to get information from WCLS and _____ stated that he would then call the NCCI, or occasionally BRABAND INSURANCE, to get the rates applicable per $100.00 of payroll for each class of employee in order to calculate the estimated annual premium. _____ stated that the NCCI calculates and assigns these rates.

b7C

_____ stated that he thinks that LUMBERMANS was the WCLS carrier in 1998 and that they only provided assigned risk coverage for one year. _____ stated that LUMBERMANS may have stopped carrying assigned risk insurance and WCLS would have reapplied to the pool. _____ indicated that normally carriers renew the policies and conduct a year-end audit to make adjustments to the premium after looking at the amount of actual payroll assigned to each class of employees as compared to the estimates given at the beginning of the policy. _____ recalled that LUMBERMANS had some trouble getting the necessary information to conduct this audit from WCLS, but did not recall a big adjustment at the end of the policy. [REDACTED] recalled that WCLS and LUMBERMANS had a dispute over keeping the appointments for this "physical audit." [REDACTED] stated that he was not ever present when these audits were supposed to take place, but he had conversations with [REDACTED] and told them that WCLS had to comply with the audit. [REDACTED] also stated that WCLS had been in business for many years and knew that the audit had to be done. [REDACTED] stated that he explained to [REDACTED] that if the current carrier was not satisfied with the audit, then WCLS could have problems getting further insurance through the pool. [REDACTED] WCLS resubmitted to the pool during this audit because they had failed to comply with an earlier audit with USF&G on their worker's compensation insurance.

[REDACTED] related that he was contacted by a man, First Name Unknown (FNU) Last Name Unknown (LNU), from LUMBERMANS approximately four times about the audit. [REDACTED] also recalled being informed by the NCCI that WCLS had a problem because they had a previous audit that was "still open" with USF&G from the year before. [REDACTED] stated that as long as there were two open audits, the NCCI would not allow WCLS to get assigned risk insurance through the pool. [REDACTED] related that he had 3-6 conversations with a female, FNU LNU, from USF&G about their audit. [REDACTED] stated that USF&G finally got what they wanted, but LUMBERMANS still had problems. [REDACTED] stated that he would contact [REDACTED] about the problems and give her the name and number of the man at LUMBERMANS to contact to clear up the audit. [REDACTED] indicated that having one audit open was understandable, but two was a problem.

[REDACTED] explained that assigned risk carriers generally conduct an audit at the end of the policy year in order to calculate any necessary "adjustments" to the overall premium paid. [REDACTED] explained that if the insured had more payroll in a class than estimated, they would have to pay more at the end of the year as an adjustment to the premium. [REDACTED] indicated that sometimes interim audits are done with large companies or if the company has had problems in the past with audits. [REDACTED] stated that these interim audits are a way to prevent large adjustments and related problems at the end of a policy.

[REDACTED] stated that he does not know a great deal about WCLS' operations because he does not really know the individuals involved or meet with them. [REDACTED] stated that he does not know what [REDACTED] exact title is, but he believes that [REDACTED] stated that he has never met or talked to [REDACTED] in the time that he has [REDACTED] and did not recall seeing her signature. [REDACTED] stated that most people sign the forms. [REDACTED] acknowledged that it was not unusual to see [REDACTED] signature stamped on Accord forms and did not know if he had ever seen her handwritten signature.

[REDACTED] indicated that he did not know what [REDACTED] title was, but knew that she occasionally had to get information from someone else [REDACTED] and she has to talk to him about some things, but he does not know for sure if she gets information from him. [REDACTED] stated that he believes that [REDACTED] got information from [REDACTED] directly and if there was a problem he would tell [REDACTED] would talk to [REDACTED] [REDACTED] stated that he has probably called [REDACTED] to get some questions answered, but he cannot remember the last time he did and indicated that it would be very rare.

[REDACTED] stated that he does not believe that [REDACTED] file would contain any correspondence or memorandum documenting contact between [REDACTED] and WCLS. [REDACTED] stated that the file would contain WCLS payroll information, Accords filed with the NCCI, loss runs, loss reports, and pool changing sheets.

[REDACTED] stated that he had seen one of the [REDACTED] in a restaurant with [REDACTED] but he does not really know any of the [REDACTED] stated that he has probably seen JACK DUFF, JR. [REDACTED] indicated that he did not want to speculate about their relationships, especially in light of the fact that [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] initially stated that he could not remember the names of any specific WCLS clients, but recalled that he had seen a list of some or all of their clients. After reviewing a list of WCLS clients [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] he recognized the names CURTIS STORAGE & TRUCKING (CURTIS), CUSTODIAL PLUS, and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER as clients of WCLS. [REDACTED] recalled that CURTIS was a trucking company, CUSTODIAL PLUS was a janitorial service company, and REM was a recycling plant.

[REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] provided worker's compensation and general liability insurance for these companies for approximately the last six years, but he did not know what they do beyond his previous descriptions.

[REDACTED] stated that he also recalled that WCLS had several liquor distributors as clients. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] issued a certificate of insurance to JUDGE & DOLPH after they requested one from WCLS. [REDACTED] recalled a worker's compensation claim from PACIFIC WINE about a month ago, but he could not remember the specifics of the claim.

[REDACTED] stated that he had heard the name UNION LIQUOR, but was not sure if someone from there had filed a claim. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he could not remember doing so, but stated that [REDACTED] a certificate of insurance to ROMANO BROTHERS and PACIFIC WINE.

[REDACTED] stated that he has no knowledge of [REDACTED] being a WCLS client. After reviewing a list of WCLS clients [REDACTED] with the NCCI on behalf of WCLS. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] He assumes that the information is correct and that if it is not, the audit by the insurance carrier will catch it and adjust it up or down. [REDACTED] stated that the auditors get WCLS' tax records and conduct a physical audit at the end of each year. [REDACTED] stated that he advised WCLS that the information should be accurate to avoid a big adjustment at the end of the year. [REDACTED] stated that he never saw WCLS' books or payroll, but "took what they (WCLS) gave me" and didn't challenge them. [REDACTED] stated that companies don't want you to see their payroll, that's what audits are for. [REDACTED] stated, [REDACTED] stated that if the information was incorrect, he had no way of knowing. [REDACTED] stated that he counted on insurance companies to verify the information provided.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] advised that he was aware that WCLS had recently changed the class code allocation of their employees in order to get voluntary insurance. [REDACTED] someone at WCLS that [REDACTED] didn't have a market for them at their current allocation and BRABAND worked with AMCOMP and WCLS to get them voluntary insurance. [REDACTED] knows that WCLS' current allocation had more employees using the warehousing class code and less employees classified as clerical. [REDACTED] stated that he knows that this caused their premiums to go up. [REDACTED] indicated that [REDACTED] told him of the allocation change, but did not provide him with an explanation as to why they changed.

b7C

[REDACTED] stated that it is really the amount of payroll per class code, not the actual number of employees per class code, that determines the premium, but acknowledged that the two are usually related. [REDACTED] stated that WCLS experience modifier is still bad and their premiums are still high, but he stated that the premiums will ultimately go down because it is the modifier that hurts WCLS' premium.

194B-CG-105773-302

Continuation of FD-302 of [REDACTED]

, On 01/10/2000 , Page 8

[REDACTED] stated that WCLS' modifier is high because they have losses in warehousing. [REDACTED] stated that WCLS really does not have that many overall losses (claims) in warehousing, but stated that they had one bad year in the 1990s within the last five years and they have a high number of warehousing claims based on the low number of warehousing employees they have and the high number of clerical employees they have.

b6

[REDACTED] stated that this, coupled with the recent changes in class codes, caused him to have doubts about the previously submitted figures, but he stated that there was not much he could do about it.

[REDACTED] stated that he told [REDACTED] [REDACTED] stated that it made him wonder why it was taking so long for WCLS to comply and if the numbers were wrong. [REDACTED] asked himself if the information they were giving him was wrong. [REDACTED] asked [REDACTED] a couple of times and she told him they were correct. [REDACTED] stated that he also asked [REDACTED] if they were coded right and if there were that many clerical employees. [REDACTED] that it was distorting the base premium. [REDACTED] also assured him the numbers were correct.

b6

[REDACTED] related that he explained to [REDACTED] that the experience modifier was based on the losses compared to the premiums. [REDACTED] that if the premiums were down and the losses were high for that premium, they were not really saving anything because the percentage of losses to premiums was high, causing the modifier to go up.

[REDACTED] stated that this was a "nice way" to say "are we where we should be" or questioning the accuracy of the information. [REDACTED] WCLS would be better off in the long run if they got their modifier more in line.

_____ stated that he never asked or was told that these numbers are fraudulent or even that the numbers were wrong. _____ stated that he had doubts, but stated that the insurance carriers confirm the numbers. _____ stated that LUMBERMANS in specific gave him some doubts and he asked himself, "Is LUMBERMANS seeing something?" _____ stated that he still does not know if the numbers are fraudulent and indicated that WCLS could have returned to the pool because they cleared things up with the NCCI, so he figured all was okay. _____

_____ stated that he looks more at whether the forms were complete than at accuracy.

_____ was shown a copy of a _____ letter from _____ and attached responses from WCLS to the NCCI in which WCLS indicated "we are unaware of the specific operations Remedial Environmental Manpower provides." _____ indicated that he was aware that _____ was the

_____ was informed that _____ had been on the REM payroll and he was asked how someone providing him insurance on REM could not know what REM did for the purpose of providing insurance information for WCLS. _____ responded, "I took what they gave me, I didn't profit from it." _____ stated that if _____ and responds that she doesn't know what one does, that it was not his job to question her responses. _____ stated that he did not recall if he saw the responses or not.

Monitor says John Duff III should be barred from union

BY CAM SIMPSON
FEDERAL COURT REPORTER

The son of a controversial city contractor should be barred from an international union for life because of his reputed organized crime ties and his alleged embezzlement of almost $173,000, a court-appointed union monitor said in a report made public Friday.

John "Jack" Duff III, son of city contractors John F. Duff Jr. and Patricia Green Duff, allegedly worked from 1989 to '91 in a no-show job as an international organizer with the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union.

Duff collected $172,930 for union work that was never performed, according to the report by union monitor Kurt W. Muellenberg.

His report also alleged that Duff was involved in a mob-connected bookmaking operation, had ties to former top Chicago rackets boss Rocco Infelise and threatened to use his mob ties to kill a police officer's family.

Most of the allegations were disclosed in late 1998 when Muellenberg's office released the findings of an extensive investigation into union corruption charges.

Since then, Duff's family has come under fire for netting millions of dollars in city contracts for a family janitorial firm that allegedly had a bogus designation as a woman-owned business.

City officials said late last year that they were nixing the Duffs' contracting preference because their firm was actually run by men.

A second Duff-connected company, Remedial Environmental Manpower, did not lose its designation as a minority-owned business.

According to the monitor's report, that company paid the union-connected Duff son $72,610 in 1996.

Duff son accused of $172,000 job scam at union

By Ray Gibson
and Andy Martin
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

A lawyer appointed to root out corruption in one of the nation's most powerful unions said Friday that a member of the controversial Duff family cheated the labor organization out of $172,000, knowingly associated with organized crime figures, and ran an illegal Florida sport bookmaking operation while on the payroll of the union.

Kurt W. Muellenberg, the Washington, D.C., lawyer appointed by the U.S. Justice Department and the hotel workers union to rid it of organized crime figures, banned Chicagoan John Duff III from ever holding a position in the labor organization.

Muellenberg released a report on Friday that detailed a two-year investigation of Duff and his ties to organized crime and his alleged ghost payroll for the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union (HEREIU). Attempts to reach Duff's attorney for comment were unsuccessful.

Duff, 48, is one of three sons of John Duff Jr., the head of a family whose companies have won $100 million in government business under Mayor Richard M. Daley. The family has held fundraisers for the mayor and provided campaign workers for Daley-supported candidates.

Following disclosures in the Tribune last year, the city concluded that one Duff firm, Windy City Maintenance, improperly had claimed it was a woman-owned business enterprise. The city yanked the designation that had allowed the firm to cash in on the city's minority set aside program.

The U.S. attorney's office now is investigating Windy City, and sources said the federal inquiry also includes John Duff III's union role and the alleged Florida book-making operation.

Despite Muellenberg's report, Duff remains an official in the Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union, Local 3, a union founded by his father.

Muellenberg's findings contend that in 1996, Duff was on several payrolls, pocketing more than $202,000. In addition to his $35,000-a-year job as an international organizer with the hotel workers, he received $88,333 from the liquor union. He also drew salaries from a family-run business connected to Windy City Maintenance and $72,600 from Remedial Environmental Manpower Inc., another firm associated with the Duffs that handles the city's Blue Bag recycling program.

Muellenberg has been working since 1995 to clean up the 250,000-member hotel workers union. He was appointed to monitor union activities after the U.S. Justice Department sued the union, alleging that for 25 years the union was controlled by organized crime figures.

The union was run until 1998 by the late labor leader Edward Hanley of Chicago, one of the nation's most influential union bosses. Muellenberg forced Hanley to step down in 1998 and removed Hanley's son, Thomas, as the president of the powerful Local 1 in Chicago.

Muellenberg also previously issued orders revoking former U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's $150,000 consulting contract with the union and ousted Robert Hickman, the convicted former head of the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority, from his job as a union organizer. The monitor took actions against both men because of their criminal convictions.

The Duffs and Hanleys have been friends for years, according to the report. Edward Hanley testified in hearings before the monitor that he hired the younger Duff in 1991 to organize employees of the Alton Belle Casino in Downstate Alton.

But by 1992, the report contended, Duff actually was living most of the time in Florida, where his "principal occupation" was operation of an illegal bookmaking ring with organized crime figures from New York, New Jersey and Florida.

According to the monitor's report, the sports betting ring operated out of apartments that were first rented by the elder Duff and Windy City. Later, a Miami condominium was bought by the elder Duff.

The betting ring was the target of a federal investigation that fell apart when the lead FBI agent in Miami was caught embezzling funds from the agency.

But from December 1993 until about September 1994, a confidential informant inside the bookmaking operation was cooperating with authorities, court records show.

Devices that traced the phone numbers of outgoing calls were placed on phones in the operation, and there were 50 tape recordings of telephone conversations made during the investigation, the report said.

John Duff III "was overheard in approximately 15 conversations during the February through September 1994 period, mostly discussing betting lines," according to the report.

When Duff did return to Chicago, he spent a great deal of time gambling at Chicago area riverboats while on the union payroll, the report said.

"Of the 80 visits [Duff] made to Chicago area riverboat casinos during 1993-1996, at least 30 of these visits occurred during Local 1 office hours when [Duff] was allegedly in staff meetings and making office calls at HEREIU Local 1," the report found.

In just four trips to the gaming boats monitored by investigators, Duff used cash to buy $36,300 in chips when he entered the boats.

The monitor concluded that because of his frequent stays in Florida, his trips to the boats, and overseas travel, Duff wasn't working when he filed reports saying he was.

"I find that [Duff] embezzled approximately $172,930 from the HEREIU in the form of salary received for services not performed," Muellenberg concluded.

According to the report, Duff's association with organized crime figures dated to 1981 when he was working with a Kentucky gambler in Florida.

The report noted that Duff had testified as a government witness in the 1992 trial of reputed organized crime figure Rocco Infelice. Testifying under a grant of immunity, Duff said he often bet with mob bookmakers and had two meetings with Infelice over a gambling debt.

In November 1993, Duff was arrested by police in Miami Beach and boasted of his ties to organized crime figures in Chicago, threatening to have a police officer and his family killed, the report contended.

Contracts boss out in shake-up by Daley

By Gary Washburn
Tribune Staff Writer

Contracting irregularities that have put political pressure on an embarrassed Mayor Richard Daley and forced a string of reforms cost the city's purchasing chief his job Thursday.

For weeks City Hall insiders had said it was only a matter of time before purchasing agent Alexander Grzyb took the fall after the Tribune revealed that questionable contracts had been awarded to two politically connected firms. The ax finally came down just before a news conference at which Daley announced the appointment of Grzyb's successor.

David Malone, 38, an executive recruited from the R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. printing firm, will be the city's "chief procurement officer," a revamped title that Daley said reflects a wider range of responsibilities to ensure integrity in acquisition and delivery of goods and services.

Malone's responsibilities will go well beyond the specific role of purchasing agent to include all aspects of the contract process, including bidding, management and accountability, Daley said.

At the heart of Thursday's change were Tribune revelations surrounding the two contractors, Windy City Maintenance and G.R. Structures.

Windy City Maintenance, a janitorial firm that has won millions of dollars in business under a city affirmative-action program, falsely portrayed itself as being operated by a woman. Critics contend that the program, designed to give a boost to female and minority-owned firms, has been compromised by "front" companies that siphon off set-aside business.

G.E. Structures, a fence company that also has garnered millions in city business, regularly charged prices far higher than stipulated in its contract, a Tribune investigation found.

In his prepared remarks announcing Malone's appointment, Daley made no reference to the outgoing purchasing chief. But when questioned, Daley avoided criticism of Grzyb, saying that he had left because he "wanted to go."

Grzyb has held a succession of public jobs. He was a staffer in the Cook County state's attorney's office when it was run by Daley in the 1980s. When Daley was elected mayor in 1989, Grzyb followed him to City Hall.

Grzyb "did a very good job" and "worked hard in 22 years in government," Daley said.

"You can't just blame him" for contract problems, the mayor said. "You can't just blame one person."

The process broke down. That's what happened. It is called internal bureaucracy.

Attempts to reach Grzyb for comment were unsuccessful.

The Tribune has revealed that Grzyb is a friend of Richard Crandall Jr., the owner of G.E. Structures. One of Grzyb's nephews works for another Crandall-owned company.

And it was on Grzyb's watch that Windy City Maintenance won and retained designation as female-owned.

G.E. Structures also has contributed to Daley's political coffers, and Crandall buys commercial insurance from John Daley, the mayor's brother.

Men in the Duff family—who the Tribune investigation found actually control Windy City Maintenance—have provided political workers for the mayor on Election Day and have held at least two fundraisers for him, including a breakfast a year ago at which he made an appearance.

The patriarch of the family, John Duff Jr., and his son, John Duff III, have ties to organized crime.

The appointment of Malone, an African-American, is expected to go down well with black aldermen, who have complained about front companies getting affirmative-action business and about what they consider to be a grossly inadequate volume of city contracts with black-owned firms.

Malone, who has been in the Chicago area for only 14 months as director of worldwide procurement for Donnelley, vowed to run a straight operation.

"I am a pretty tough guy," said Malone, who is married and the father of three. "I was brought up in the '60s in Mississippi. My dad was a farmer, and we came from strong traditional values around church and trying to do the right thing. I would resist any attempts to influence things unduly."

Malone, who previously worked for Xerox Corp., Medical Specialties Co. and Digital Equipment Corp., said bosses and friends at past jobs sometimes sought to intervene in purchasing decisions.

"People always try to influence things, and I think you have to have a set of values and a process that has integrity to drive the right decision," he said.

Assuming City Council approval of his appointment, Malone would earn $133,000 a year. Grzyh received $104,000. Still, Malone's salary would be a cut of about $15,000 from what he made at Donnelley, officials said.

Malone said he was attracted to the city job because of his desire to give the Purchasing Department "credibility beyond what the perceptions are today" and "because I love a challenge."

Malone, who plans to move his family from Naperville to Chicago, said he expects to start his new job on March 22.

Under state law, municipal purchasing agents must be given four-year terms, to shield them from undue political pressures.

Daley said Grzyh was "acting" purchasing agent despite his long tenure because of Daley's opposition to awarding employment contracts that ultimately could require costly buyouts.

But the mayor said he has decided to offer a permanent title and four-year term to Malone "so it doesn't become an issue" with the media as Grzyh's situation had become.

Daley bristled at the suggestion that Grzyh's departure might be window dressing to obscure the fact that both Wendy Cox, Malonance and G.F. Stronach have ties to Daley or his family.

"Wait, wait, wait," the mayor said. "I will make you a bet that if you go through everybody in the city, I know somebody. When the Tribune comes in and talks to me about a planned manufacturing district, do they have ties to me? Yes they do."

Executives of Tribune Co. and the newspaper met with Daley last summer to outline expansion plans for the Freedom Center printing plant at Chicago Avenue and Halsted Street and to "try to get a commitment from the city to maintain that area for industrial use," said Kelly Shannon, a company spokeswoman.

The administration decided to back the proposal, and a zoning plan is expected to be considered soon by the Chicago Plan Commission, Shannon said.

Daley later acknowledged that the newspaper never asked for anything inappropriate and that he meets with executives from corporations to discuss a variety of requests "every day."

Malone is one of nine children raised on a farm in Pickens, Miss. His father, John Henry, was a local civil rights leader, Malone said.

Malone's father led a voting-rights effort and drew a volley of gunfire into the family home one night after deciding to become the first black man to run for county-wide office.

There were no injuries, but David Malone, who was 5, said. "The second night was more fun, because my dad and his brothers and some of his friends waited for a return visit and they were quite ready. I was proud of that."

The assailants returned but "left quickly" as bullets flew their way, Malone said.

City urged to investigate Duff pay-law compliance

By Laurie Cohen

TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

Supporters of Chicago's living-wage ordinance called on city officials Wednesday to look into claims that politically connected Windy City Maintenance and other contractors may not be paying their workers the wages required by law on city jobs.

At a news conference at City Hall, Ald. Theodore Thomas (15th) said he asked purchasing officials to investigate wages paid by Windy City Maintenance and other firms and report in 10 days.

Windy City Maintenance, a janitorial firm run by members of the controversial Duff family, is required to comply with the statute in paying day laborers who clean up after Taste of Chicago and other festivals under a contract with the Mayor's Office of Special Events.

The living-wage ordinance requires certain city contractors to pay day laborers and other select employees at least $7.60 an hour. The City Council passed the measure, which is designed to benefit the working poor, in 1998.

when it also approved raises for aldermen.

Asked at an unrelated event about allegations the city isn't enforcing the law, Mayor Richard Daley said, "I'll look into it."

Thomas said a study released Tuesday by researchers at the University of Illinois at Chicago has raised questions about how well the city is enforcing of the ordinance.

The study by the university's Center for Urban Economic Development found that 82 percent of 510 homeless people surveyed last October earned less than $5.50 an hour at their most recent jobs. More than one-fourth said they had worked in City of Chicago buildings or at city-sponsored events such as Taste of Chicago.

Nik Theodore, the UIC center's director, said the study focused on how many homeless people were involved in day labor and didn't directly address the city's enforcement of the living-wage law.

"Our study is being held up to have found more than what we found," he said.

Theodore said the study did indicate that the city may not be enforcing the ordinance with respect to wage payments under subcontracts. He also said some of the homeless people surveyed mentioned low wage payments by Windy City Maintenance.

Windy City Maintenance officials referred questions to their attorney, who couldn't be reached.

Last year, the city ruled that Windy City Maintenance had improperly claimed that it was a controlled by a woman and bumped it from a city set-aside program designed to aid female and minority-owned businesses.

[redacted] customer service representative for [redacted] [redacted] was interviewed by the undersigned agents in the presence of his attorney, [redacted] [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] has worked at [redacted] [redacted] present title is customer service representative and his duties include acting as liaison between insurance companies and insurance brokers. In 1993 or 1994 [redacted] began working with [redacted] an insurance broker, on four of [redacted] accounts. These accounts consist of Windy City Labor Service, Windy City Maintenance, Curtis Storage and Trucking, and Remedial Environmental Manpower. About three times per year [redacted] speaks telephonically with [redacted] [redacted] usually deals with [redacted] on these accounts. [redacted] gives information on the accounts to [redacted] in written form and [redacted] then uses the information to fill out insurance applications for the clients.

b6
b7C

On at least one occasion [redacted] forwarded an application known as an acord to the insurance company after [redacted] had filled it out. This was an acord for Windy City Labor Service and [redacted] forwarded the copy provided by [redacted] to AmComp Insurance. [redacted] was attempting to obtain a quote from AmComp as to the potential cost of workers' compensation coverage for Windy City Labor Service. [redacted] described Windy City Labor Service's experience modifier as the worst that he has ever seen and he explained that a high experience modifier is an indication that the insured's payroll may be misclassified and that the insured's employees sustain a high number of injuries.

b6
b7C

In late June of 1999, [redacted] visited Romano Brothers, a client of Windy City Labor Service, with loss control representatives from AmComp in a further effort to ascertain whether or not AmComp would be willing to provide workers' compensation coverage for Windy City Labor Service.
[redacted] did not actually visit the Romano Brothers warehouse, but [redacted] discussed the visit with him afterwards. [redacted] then telephoned [REDACTED] and told him that [REDACTED] would need correct payroll figures if [REDACTED] was going to be successful in securing coverage from AmComp. [REDACTED] replied that a new application would be faxed to [REDACTED] cannot remember if he was present for [REDACTED] telephone call to [REDACTED] or if [REDACTED] told him about it later. [REDACTED] last spoke to [REDACTED] when [REDACTED] called to ask [REDACTED] could provide him with the current payroll for Windy City Labor Service. [REDACTED] was surprised that [REDACTED] did not have a copy of the payroll and he asked [REDACTED] why he did not have his own copy. [REDACTED] did not give [REDACTED] an answer. [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that he wanted to start working on the renewal of Windy City Labor Service's workers' compensation coverage. [REDACTED] thought that this was odd because the current coverage does not expire until July 5, 2000, and the usual practice is to start on renewals about sixty days before the expiration date.

[redacted] also performed an audit on WCLS for the worker's compensation insurance that was provided by The Hartford for the period that ended in July of 1998. This audit was not conducted until September of 1999. The audit was conducted at the request of WCLS, a representative of which sent a letter to The Hartford requesting the re-audit. The initial audit had never been finalized and WCLS was having problems getting further worker's compensation coverage as a new company will not provide coverage if an old audit has not been cleared. [redacted] believes that the letter from WCLS requested that he contact [redacted] again. [redacted] did attempt to contact [redacted] but he never received a response from her and he eventually met with another representative of WCLS, [redacted] met with [redacted]

Workers seek to break from Duff-run union

and Jorge Luis Mota
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

Already under investigation by the federal government, the politically connected Duff family has developed another headache from an unlikely source: a group of tortilla makers on Chicago's Southwest Side.

The tortilla makers are employees of Azteca Foods, and for the last six months they have been trying to figure out a way to oust the union that represents them, the Duff-controlled Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Warehousemen, Clerical, Distillery, Rectifying, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union Local 3.

The workers complain that Local 3 officials have done little to improve working conditions at Azteca and have not fought to secure significant pay increases or better benefits. Furthermore, they contend that they have never been allowed to vote for Local 3's officers and have been threatened with physical harm for trying to decertify the Duffs' union.

The National Labor Relations Board is investigating an allegation that a Duff associate threatened Azteca workers, according to an NLRB spokesman.

"The union is more in favor of the company than the workers," said Alfonso Navarro, an Azteca worker and union steward.

In filings with federal regulators and in an interview, union officials and Azteca's owner suggest that the friction stems from a handful of disgruntled employees who are pressuring their colleagues.

But the conflict doesn't represent the first time the Duffs have been accused of neglecting union members.

The Tribune reported last summer that Windy City Labor, a Duff-owned company, was supplying non-union day laborers to the city's biggest liquor distributors, undermining members of Local 3 who work at the same liquor distributors.

The Tribune also reported that companies connected with the Duffs have won $100 million in city-related business, many of them contracts set aside for women and minorities, since Mayor Richard Daley took office in 1989. The Tribune found that one of the companies, a janitorial firm called Windy City Maintenance and purportedly owned and operated by a woman, actually was run by the men in the Duff family.

Prompted by the Tribune stories, the U.S. attorney's office is investigating the possible conflict of interest between the Duff union and Windy City Labor. Federal investigators also have sought records from the city on Windy City Maintenance and its certification as a woman-owned business.

Meanwhile, the workers, dissatisfied with the terms of their most recent contract, are trying to withhold their union wages from the Duffs' union. In January, the workers voted 70 to 10 to withhold their dues, a vote the union is challenging before the U.S. Department of Labor.

Ultimately, the workers said, they hope to oust the union altogether. A decertification vote could be held when the current contract expires in 2002.

The dispute has pitted a small group of laborers, most of whom cannot speak English, against one of the city's most prominent Hispanic businessmen, Azteca owner Arthur Velasquez, as well as a family that has been tied to some of the city's most powerful politicians and organized crime leaders.

Neither Patrick Duff, the union's president, nor his brother, Jack, the secretary and treasurer, could be reached for comment. The Tribune provided questions to an attorney representing the Duffs, but he did not respond.

But in documents filed to challenge the workers' vote to withhold their dues, an attorney for Local 3 alleged that Navarro had threatened workers if they didn't vote against the union, a charge Navarro denies.

The attorney, William Widmer III, also alleged that Navarro distributed misleading literature to sway the vote and used methods that falsely suggested that Azteca's management supported the effort not to pay dues.

Velasquez, meanwhile, blamed the dispute on a handful of "militant" workers at the factory, 5005 S. Nagle Ave. He argued that his company's pay and benefits are far superior to its competitors and that many of his workers have more than 20 years on the job.

"There's a couple people who are very disgruntled—who are being advised by some outside people—who want to change the world," Velasquez said. "If this were such a bad place to work, why would you work here for more than 20 years?"

In an interview with the Tribune, four Azteca workers—Navarro, Josefina Bonilla, Angelina Diaz and Teresa Morales—all with 19 or more years on the job, said the Duff union has represented them for about six years. Until they began complaining last summer, the workers said they were not invited to vote on union officers and rarely saw representatives of Local 3, except when a new contract was being negotiated.

The labor problems intensified a year ago, however, when negotiations began on a new contract. The workers said they requested a 50-cent-an-hour wage increase, plus beefed up pension and medical benefits. The workers said the average pay is between $8 and $10 an hour.

The union, however, agreed to a contract that called for wage increases of 25 to 30 cents an hour with no additional benefits.

Navarro said he and some other workers were infuriated when the union approved the contract without their consent. They filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board for an election to withhold their union dues, which was scheduled for Jan. 14.

In the weeks before the vote, union president Patrick Duff met with workers at Azteca and brought along a Teamster official, Geno Rodriguez, to translate. In affidavits filed with the NLRB, three workers contend Rodriguez threatened them with "physical harm or other unspecified reprisals if the deauthorization campaign continued."

According to the affidavits, Rodriguez asked the workers if they knew what happened to Rudy Lozano, a union activist who was murdered in 1983.

"When Geno asked if we knew what happened to Rudy Lozano, I thought he was trying to scare us into giving up our fight," said Bonilla, a 26-year veteran at Azteca.

Rodriguez could not be reached for comment.

The workers, meanwhile, called the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration last fall to complain about working conditions at Azteca. After a two-week inspection, OSHA investigators cited Azteca for a variety of problems, including excessive sound levels, failing to provide protective equipment and improper training for chemical hazards.

Velasquez said some violations were inevitable given the duration of the inspection and OSHA's "phone book full of rules." He said most of the problems have been addressed.

Duffs lose city fest cleanups

New company wins contract

By Laurie Cohen
and Andrew Martin
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITERS

With the first summer festival at Grant Park a little more than two weeks away, city officials on Wednesday said they have finally selected a contractor for the massive task of cleaning up debris afterward.

But instead of Windy City Maintenance, the politically connected firm that has handled the job since shortly after Mayor Richard Daley took office, the city has tentatively selected an 8-month-old firm called Urban Services of America from among five firms that submitted proposals.

James Law, executive director of the Mayor's Office of Special Events, declined to say whether Urban Services of America submitted the lowest price.

"This is based more on qualifications and their presentation," said Law, adding that the city would begin negotiating a contract in the next few days. The proposals are not available for public review until the city has signed a formal agreement. Last year, the contract was worth $573,000.

But the city has yet to pick a company to make signs and banners for the festival, a contract some vendors say has been marred by favoritism for years. The company that now has the contract, Frank O. Carlson & Co., will continue providing signs until new proposals are considered.

Law struggled to explain why the city had yet to seek proposals for the sign contract, worth $108,000 in 1999, though the annual Chicago Gospel Music Festival is scheduled for the first weekend in June.

Before this year, the Mayor's Office of Special Events had a waiver from city purchasing requirements that allowed agency officials to simply select janitorial companies, sign firms and certain other vendors for festivals, instead of putting the work out for bid. Law explained that delays in selecting vendors for this year's festivals were due in part to the change in policy requiring that vendors submit formal proposals.

The city changed its policy after the Tribune reported that Windy City Maintenance, a company purportedly owned and operated by a woman, was actually run by men in the Duff family, some of whom have organized crime connections.

Windy City Maintenance was created a month after Daley took office in 1989, and a year later it got a no-bid contract to clean up after summer festivals. Daley reportedly told the late Kathy Osterman, then head of the special events office, to make sure the Duffs got city work, an allegation Daley has denied.

Windy City Maintenance has held the contract ever since and also picked up cleaning contracts for the Harold Washington Library, the International Terminal at O'Hare International Airport, Navy Pier and McCormick Place. In all, the firm received as much as $13 million a year in city-related business.

Earlier this year, after the city corroborated the Tribune's findings, Windy City Maintenance lost its woman-owned designation and about $1 million of its city business.

Urban Services of America is an offshoot of Reclaim Service Technologies, a Chicago firm that has specialized in welding plastic garbage carts for cities.

Urban Services' president, Doug Ritter, said the company now does everything from cleaning California highways to transporting portable bathrooms for Chicago city festivals. He said the festival clean-up contract was "unique for anybody except for the prior contractor."

"We are not a business obviously that is posing as what we aren't," he said. "We are not minorities, and we are not women." But he added that his firm planned to give up to 60 percent of its work to minority- and female-owned subcontractors.

In another contract-related matter, city officials said they were re-evaluating proposals to manage concessions at O'Hare's domestic terminals after Daley pal Michael Marchese backed out as a partner in the firm that currently has the $2.5 million-a-year contract and was favored to win it again.

Marchese, of Harlem-Irving Cos., dropped out as a partner in Airport Retail Management to devote more attention to developing property, according to a spokesman. The other partners in Airport Retail Management are Richard Stein's Mesirrow-Stein Development Services and Sharon Gist Gilliam's Unison-Maximus. Stein and Gilliam are both political allies of Daley.

Details:

The above captioned case was predicated at the request of United States Attorney Scott R. Lassar. The request followed several articles published by the Chicago Tribune revealing allegations that the Duff family and their businesses, WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE (WCM), WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (WCLS), and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (R.E.M.) received approximately $100 million from the city of Chicago since Mayor Richard Daley was elected. The allegations involve mail fraud/wire fraud in relation to the city contracts obtained by WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE and possible violations of the Taft/Hartley Act and kickbacks in relation to the use of non-union members at the four local liquor distributors in the Chicago area represented by Distillery Worker's Union, Local 3.

The Duff's have strong union ties with the Distillery Workers Union Local 3. John Duff, Jr. was a former executive for Local 3. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] John Duff, Jr. also has strong ties to Organized Crime in Chicago and had close personal friendships with Outfit members Anthony Spilotro, [REDACTED] indicated that AMCOMP was a monoline carrier and explained that AMCOMP only dealt with one type of insurance, worker's compensation. [REDACTED] stated that this was unusual, but it also meant that they would often help when the market was difficult. [REDACTED] indicated that they did not put WCLS in the voluntary market when they initially sought it while their assigned risk policy was in affect. [REDACTED] indicated that nothing was done for awhile and then he and the AMCOMP people decided that it might be beneficial to visit one of WCLS' clients so that the AMCOMP underwriting and loss control people could get a better feel for the risk involved and what WCLS employees did. [REDACTED] stated that he also liked to get out and look at significant clients to see what they did. [REDACTED] explained that by this time it was getting close to July, the time that WCLS needed to renew their policy or find a new carrier.

[REDACTED] explained that he then called [REDACTED] and raised the possibility of visiting one of WCLS' client sites. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] ultimately agreed to this and chose ROMANO BROTHERS and arranged for [REDACTED] and two AMCOMP loss control employees to visit ROMANO BROTHERS. [REDACTED] indicated that he, two AMCOMP loss control employees from Indianapolis, and an unknown male from WCLS management were walked through the warehouse by an unknown male in management

with ROMANO BROTHERS. The walk through did not include any documentation being shown by [REDACTED] or anyone else, and consisted of the AMCOMP personnel asking questions and being shown who was a WCLS employee by the manager from WCLS and being told what was going on by the ROMANO BROTHERS manager. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that during the walk through he noticed that all of the WCLS employees they were shown were performing janitorial functions such as sweeping or serving as line workers counting bottles.

[REDACTED] recalled talking to the AMCOMP loss control people after the walk through and saying that he hoped that [REDACTED] could help them find a market. [REDACTED] related that the AMCOMP loss control indicated that they were going to provide a report for underwriting on the visit to ROMANO BROTHERS, but he did not know if it was written or verbal. [REDACTED] stated that it may have been verbal because of the timing. [REDACTED] explained that they were working to get WCLS voluntary insurance before their assigned risk policy ran out in early July, 1999. [REDACTED] did not recall speaking to the WCLS manager after the walk through.

[REDACTED] stated that after the walk through, he spoke to [REDACTED] LNU in AMCOMP's underwriting department. [REDACTED] recalled that she told him that the premium would be considerable if they did it, but she did not say they would take WCLS on. A few days later, [REDACTED] LNU gave him a proposed quote of approximately $175,00-180,000. [REDACTED] explained that this was based on WCLS having their payroll classified with $1.2 million in warehousing. [REDACTED] indicated that he had seen the [REDACTED] documentation showing these payroll figures.

[REDACTED] stated that after he went to ROMANO BROTHERS in late [REDACTED] he realized that a lot of WCLS' employees were involved in warehouse and janitorial work. [REDACTED] stated that he then went back into his company's WCLS files in order to see what types of losses WCLS had and why their experience modifier was so high. [REDACTED] stated that he saw that their payrolls had been heavily classified as clerical in the past.

[REDACTED] stated that he then called [REDACTED] and told him that he [REDACTED] had been out at ROMANO BROTHERS and needed to know what type of risk they had. [REDACTED] then told [REDACTED] that he needed the correct payroll in the governing classes of warehousing and janitorial work for WCLS. [REDACTED] then told [REDACTED] that he would get back to him. A short time later, [REDACTED] called back and said that he had new payroll numbers. [REDACTED] indicated that either [REDACTED] or himself then got the new numbers from [REDACTED] could not recall if they got a fax of the new numbers or a new application, but they got the new payroll numbers in some documented form in addition to the numbers [REDACTED] gave on the phone. [REDACTED] stated that these new payroll numbers reflected WCLS having $1.2 million in warehousing payroll. [REDACTED] indicated that either he or [REDACTED] would have forwarded these numbers on to AMCOMP because [REDACTED] is not a general agent for AMCOMP.

After receiving the new payroll figures, AMCOMP calculated the premium with these new numbers and came back with the quote of approximately $175,000-180,000. [REDACTED] called [REDACTED] back with this quote and [REDACTED] was very surprised at how high it was. [REDACTED] told him that the amount quoted was correct based on the payroll figures. [REDACTED] indicated that [REDACTED] had the authority to accept or decline the offer, but [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that he would get back to him on the quote.

[REDACTED] recalled that [REDACTED] then called him and asked him about the quote from AMCOMP and expressed surprise at how high it was and asked if [REDACTED] could get AMCOMP to lower it. [REDACTED] that he would do what he could and he contacted [REDACTED] LNU in AMCOMP's underwriting department. [REDACTED] indicated that he was able to get AMCOMP to lower the premium to approximately $165,000 and called [REDACTED] back to let them know what AMCOMP's final premium quote was. [REDACTED] recalled that they agreed to accept this premium in [REDACTED] [REDACTED] indicated that insurance carriers were providing as much as 50% scheduled credit on worker's compensation premiums at this time (1999) in order to get business. [REDACTED] indicated that this may have been the reason that [REDACTED] were so surprised. [REDACTED] stated that the type of discount that is offered, if any, depends on the insurance market at a given time.

[REDACTED] called [REDACTED] back again a short time after [REDACTED] and told [REDACTED] was upset with him [REDACTED] the second set of payroll figures which classified $1.2 million in payroll as warehousing. [REDACTED] did not know why [REDACTED] told him this, but [REDACTED] that he did not care that [REDACTED] was mad and he needed correct payroll figures.

[REDACTED] does not recall ever discussing with [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] why the numbers changed so drastically and [REDACTED] indicated that he was unsure if he had discussed it with anyone at AMCOMP. [REDACTED] indicated that neither [REDACTED] ever explained why they took the quote despite the fact that they acted so surprised at how high it was and given that it was considerably higher than what they were paying in the assigned risk market at that time. [REDACTED] reiterated that WCLS was having some audit problems with their assigned risk carriers, but stated that he was not sure this was why they were trying to leave the assigned risk market.

[REDACTED] indicated that WCLS had been in the assigned risk worker's compensation pool for companies that could not obtain worker's compensation insurance in the voluntary market. [REDACTED] indicated that [REDACTED] had attempted to find voluntary market worker's compensation insurance for WCLS in the past, but had never succeeded. [REDACTED] stated that WCLS experience modifier had always been too high in the past. [REDACTED] indicated that most of [REDACTED] on the WCLS file had been done by [REDACTED] but stated that he and [REDACTED] worked very closely on accounts. [REDACTED] stated that he had not really done much on the WCLS file in 1999 until he arranged for the walk through at [REDACTED] stated that in the past, he and [REDACTED] knew that they would probably be unsuccessful in finding a voluntary market, but attempted to do so because they had a lot of business with the client. [REDACTED] explained that he knew that WCLS was owned by the Duff family, but indicated that he did not know any of the Duffs. [REDACTED] indicated that his company worked with [REDACTED] to provide voluntary insurance for a number of other Duff family businesses, including WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE (WCM), CURTIS STORAGE & TRUCKING, and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (REM).

_____ related that he also received a telephone call from _____ in February, 2000, regarding the federal investigation into the WCLS insurance matters. _____ stated that _____ called to warn him _____ that he was going to be visited by some FBI Agents regarding WCLS. _____ then told _____ that he had already spoken to some Agents and that he had retained an attorney. When _____ attempted to inquire about the matter, _____ informed _____ that he was not going to discuss it with him anymore and asked if there was any business matters which _____ wanted to discuss. _____ recalled that _____ began swearing at him and said, "You fucking baby. Synopsis: To set lead for the Merrillville Resident Agency.

Details: Reference telecal between the writer and SA [REDACTED] dated 6/26/2000. The above captioned case was predicated at the request of United States Attorney [REDACTED]. The request followed several articles published by the Chicago Tribune revealing allegations that the Duff family and their businesses, WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE (WCM), WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (WCLS), and REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (R.E.M.) received approximately $100 million from the city of Chicago since Mayor Richard Daley was elected. The allegations involve mail fraud/wire fraud in relation to the city contracts obtained by WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE and possible violations of the Taft/Hartley Act and kickbacks in relation to the use of non-union members at the four local liquor distributors in the Chicago area represented by Distillery Worker's Union, Local 3.

The Duff's have strong union ties with the Distillery Workers Union Local 3. John Duff, Jr. was a former executive for Local 3. [REDACTED]

_____ employ workers from WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (hereafter referred to as WCLS). There is no written contract _____. The use of WCLS employees _____ did not know _____ first began using WCLS employees but believed it was _____ believed _____ might have more knowledge on how WCLS got the work _____ to supply temporary labor. While _____ he was responsible for _____ activities.

WCLS laborers are mostly employed _____. _____ estimated that 90%-95% of the WCLS laborers are _____. According to the contract between _____ if a delivery meets the requirements, as set forth in the contract, _____ required to provide the driver with a helper. _____ WCLS usually does not provide any laborers to work in the warehouse. There was one occasion, however, _____ employed WCLS employees to work in the warehouse. _____ due to _____ required more warehouse workers, so WCLS was called in to help until approximately _____.

b7C

Also, if a lot of Local 3 guys call in sick _____ call WCLS to get more laborers to fill in. When this happens, WCLS laborers are used in the warehouse as janitors and working "re-packing", "re-packing" is when a liquor manufacturer may have a promotion such as a free baseball hat with every purchase. When that happens, it is the responsibility of the distributor to shrink wrap the promotional item to the bottle.

WCLS has never provided any laborers to fill clerical positions for _____.
_____ employed WCLS laborers to perform landscaping work. WCLS employees have, in the past, have also been used to _____.
_____ has not heard of any specific problems with WCLS laborers and has been satisfied with the work provided by WCLS laborers.

b6

When _____ temporary workers the "router" would look at the route slips for the next days deliveries to determine the number of temporary workers needed. Once the number was determined, the router would call _____ at WCLS to let him know. _____ advised, however, that the number of WCLS employees requested depended on several other factors. First _____ was required to offer to any Local 705 driver not driving if he wanted to be a driver's helper. If _____ could not fill it with Local 705 _____ would call _____.
_____ had exhausted their options with the Local 705 "guys" and the _____ would call WCLS. _____ advised that the number of WCLS laborers used depended on the time of year and work load and varied between, no WCLS laborers and the use of 45 WCLS laborers. _____ uses more WCLS laborers during _____.
During _____ does not use any WCLS laborers. _____ maintains weekly billings and invoices that are sent to WCLS documenting the dollar amount paid to WCLS and the rate of pay and the department worked by WCLS laborers by department code.

b7C

To keep track of the cost of temporary labor, _____
_____.
_____ If there was ever a problem with a WCLS laborer, _____ _____ could not recall dealing with anyone but _____ _____ regarding the use of WCLS laborers at _____
_____.

_____ never heard of _____ and has had no dealings with WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE, REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER, or CURTIS TRUCKING AND STORAGE. _____ does not know _____ or JOHN "JACK"

[redacted]
[redacted] stated that the WCLS laborers were primarily used to clean and sweep the CONTINENTAL GLASS warehouses as well as move files and furniture and other manual tasks. [redacted] stated that WCLS employees would occasionally do some maintenance on the lawn and area surrounding the CONTINENTAL GLASS buildings. [redacted] indicated that he had never used WCLS laborers to do any clerical work of any kind.

[redacted] estimated that he normally used approximately 2-3 WCLS employees for a few days each month, but stated that he had some projects where he used 2-4 employees for periods of one week to three weeks. [redacted] stated that there was no contracts or paperwork from WCLS except weekly invoices documenting the hours that the employees had worked and the amount due. [redacted] stated that whenever he needed WCLS workers, he would contact a male, FNU LNU, and simply request a certain number of workers and approximate how long he would need them. [redacted] stated that CONTINENTAL GLASS paid WCLS approximately $8.00 an hour for temporary laborers.

R-4 Services has employed Windy City Labor Service (WCLS) temporary workers [redacted]

[redacted] The WCLS workers stack boxes in the warehouse and perform some cleaning duties such as sweeping the warehouse. The WCLS workers do not perform clerical work at R-4 Services.

[redacted] calls [redacted] at WCLS when he needs WCLS workers. The number of WCLS workers needed at R-4 Services varies greatly and is dependent upon the projects that R-4 Services has been hired to do. At times there may be eight to ten WCLS workers at R-4 Services on a daily basis; at other times there might only be one or two WCLS workers per day. There may be periods of up to two months when R-4 Services needs no extra workers and therefore does not use any WCLS workers.

[redacted] is not certain as to how the WCLS workers arrive at R-4 Services, but he believes that they take public transportation. [redacted] has never seen a WCLS van bring the workers to R-4 Services. The WCLS employees work ten to twelve hour days at R-4 Services and usually start at 6:00 or 7:00 am.

are represented by TEAMSTERS LOCAL 744. [REDACTED] was not involved with the collective bargaining agreement but does know the terms of the agreement. According to the agreement between UNION and LOCAL 744, if UNION does not require the use of all 70 drivers, those not used on any given day are afforded the opportunity to work as drivers helpers before UNION contacts WCLS. If UNION has a heavy delivery schedule and all 70 drivers are being used, according to the agreement, UNION must provide a driver's helper if the load is over a certain number of cases. If the load was over 300 cases on a truck, then the driver was given a helper. WCLS has provided temporary laborers to UNION since [REDACTED] has been at UNION. [REDACTED] did not know if WCLS laborers were used before he was hired.

b7C

[REDACTED] did not know who had first decided to use WCLS laborers. [REDACTED] has not been instructed by anyone at UNION that only WCLS laborers would be used. Nor has [REDACTED] had any inclination on using a different temporary labor service. UNION employs anywhere from a couple of WCLS laborers to as many as 40 WCLS laborers a day. UNION's busiest day of the week is Tuesdays when UNION will employ 40 WCLS laborers. Also, June, November, and December are typically the busiest months for UNION when UNION employs a large number of WCLS laborers.

[REDACTED] was shown several original and photocopied UNION invoices. Photocopies of these invoices are maintained in a 1A envelope. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] A "will call" pick up was an order where the customer came to UNION's warehouse to pick the order up. Almost 90% or more of WCM's contracts were with the city. Whenever WCM was going to have a recertification inspection from the city, WCM got "a heads up". [REDACTED] knew "the DUFF's" had a point of contact at the city who would give "the DUFF's" advanced notice of the recertification inspection.

The employees include day laborers from Windy City Labor Service (WCLS). The number of WCLS workers that are needed at Union Beverage varies and is dependent upon the number of orders and deliveries that Union Beverage must make on any given day. The number of WCLS workers at Union Beverage can fluctuate between ten and fifty per day.

Union Beverage employs about seventy truck drivers and the drivers are entitled by labor union agreement to a helper if they have over 300 cases to deliver in a day. The WCLS workers function as the drivers' helpers and are used to help load the trucks. WCLS workers only work in the Union Beverage warehouse during the peak periods of June and December. [redacted] [redacted] was interviewed by the undersigned agents and provided the following information:

[redacted] has been with AmComp as an underwriter since [redacted] AmComp is relatively new to the insurance business in Illinois and only received a certificate to write insurance in the state of Illinois in November of 1998. [redacted] began doing business with AmComp in January of 1999 and [redacted] now does approximately $500,000 worth of business with AmComp. In February of 1999 [redacted] brought the Windy City Labor Service (WCLS) account to AmComp in an effort to obtain workers' compensation insurance for WCLS. [redacted] sent out a letter declining to provide workers' compensation coverage for WCLS because WCLS' losses were too high.

b7C

Several months later [redacted] submitted the WCLS account for reconsideration by AmComp. At this time, [redacted] was assigned to review the account and decide if AmComp would provide workers' compensation coverage to WCLS. [redacted] pulled the old file which [redacted] had considered and examined it. [redacted] felt that the experience modifier did not seem right as it was way too high considering the number of clerical workers that were supposedly employed by WCLS. Also, when [redacted] examined the loss runs there was way too much exposure (meaning claims had been filed) for code 8292 (warehousing), especially considering the amount of payroll at that classification. Therefore [redacted] ordered an inspection by AmComp's loss control representatives before she would authorize providing workers' compensation coverage to WCLS.

b6

[redacted] of AmComp's Indianapolis office conducted the loss control inspection at Romano Brothers Beverage, a client to whom WCLS supplied day laborers. memo to the file stating that WCLS' payroll had been misclassified for years in that the number of clerical workers had been overstated. [REDACTED] also had conversations with [REDACTED] and with [REDACTED] agency regarding the overexposures in the clerical class. Subsequently [REDACTED] submitted a new application to AmComp which had a different payroll classification break down. [REDACTED] also told [REDACTED] that he thought WCLS would accept a policy with a premium of up to $150,000. [REDACTED] felt much more comfortable with the new numbers and issued a policy with a premium of approximately $160,000. [REDACTED] thought it was odd that [REDACTED] paid the new premium amount (a change from the previous policy of approximately $24,000) without questioning the reason for the increase. [REDACTED] also told [REDACTED] that if WCLS did not fully cooperate during future audits by AmComp, AmComp would cancel the policy.

AmComp's coverage of WCLS expired in July of 2000 and AmComp decided not to renew the coverage. This decision was based in part on the fact that almost all of the claimants injured while working for WCLS had retained attorneys. This made it extremely difficult for AmComp to work with the claimants to resolve their cases. In addition, [REDACTED] for AmComp, had been contacted by the FBI regarding an investigation into WCLS. [REDACTED] called [REDACTED] to find out if AmComp was going to renew coverage and was informed that coverage would not be continued. [REDACTED] submitted no renewal paperwork to AmComp and did not question [REDACTED] on the decision not to renew coverage.

[redacted] advised the Chicago Public Schools (CPS) janitorial services contract was awarded as follows: 1) A & R - Region 4; 2) ASHLEY'S CLEANING SERVICE (ASHLEY'S) - Regions 1 and 6; 3) CHICAGO CONTRACT CLEANING AND SUPPLY CO. [redacted] advised that ASHLEY'S was the lowest bidder in all six regions as they were the only vendor not part of a collective bargaining agreement (non-union). However, despite being the lowest bidder across the board the Chicago Board of Education (CBOE) only gave two regions to ASHLEY'S over concerns of awarding the entire contract to a single vendor and ASHLEY'S operational abilities to handle such an undertaking (prior to the multi-million dollar CPS contract ASHLEY'S had monthly revenues of only $600).

_____ he was trying to "strong-arm" ASHLEY'S due to their non-union status. _____

By not having a collective bargaining agreement _____ advised ASHLEY'S got a "sweetheart deal" in that they save over $2.7 million annually ($300 a month per employee for health and pension benefits times 700 employees plus additional savings for not paying vacation time based on prior seniority) which goes to their bottom-line. Also, _____ indicated that ASHLEY'S has been awarded other City of Chicago business such as the cleaning of police stations that typically went to union-only firms. [redacted]

Waste Management has used day laborers from Windy City Labor Service (WCLS) during the entire time that [redacted] has been with Waste Management. [redacted] does not have direct contact with WCLS workers or representatives very often as the front-line supervisors at Waste Management have authority to call WCLS directly in order to get any necessary workers. [redacted] is not aware of any particular person at WCLS who is contacted by Waste Management personnel. The number of workers that Waste Management hires from WCLS varies greatly and is dependent upon many factors, including holidays, special projects needing extra help, and injuries among Waste Management's regular employees.

b7C

In the early 1990's, WCLS workers were hired to help at what was then known as Clearing Disposal at 38th Street and Laramie Avenue in Cicero. [redacted] approximated that six to eight day laborers would, on average, be assigned to this site. Not all of the day laborers would necessarily be from WCLS as Waste Management also hired from Resource Dimensions, another day labor firm. The day laborers worked on the recycling line at Clearing Disposal and this entailed sorting through plastics, aluminum cans, and other materials. Occasionally the day laborers were assigned as helpers on the trucks that pick up garbage, but this was only on holidays and other infrequent occasions.

In the spring of 1992 Clearing Disposal won a start-up contract for the village of Woodridge's residential garbage pickup. This was a very busy time for Waste Management and approximately eighteen day laborers were required each day. [REDACTED] to WCLS to arrange for the workers, [REDACTED]

Clearing Disposal was also responsible for a contract in Berwyn when the city decided to change their garbage pick-up system to a cart system. Clearing Disposal was hired to start the cart system and WCLS was hired to be a sub-contractor. WCLS provided the manpower to do the assembling and distribution of the carts. [REDACTED] not certain as to the number of WCLS workers that were on the project because WCLS representatives managed the workers.

b7C

Ace Disposal is the former name of Waste Management's operation at 1500 North Hooker in Chicago. The 1500 North Hooker site is a recycling facility that processes paper and fiber products. The number of day laborers at this location has varied greatly. In 1995, the recycling facility was very busy and ran three shifts per day, seven days per week. Two to three day laborers might have been hired for each shift. In 1997 and 1998 the recycling business was in a downward swing and few day laborers were needed; two to three workers per day was the approximate average employed at 1500 North Hooker.

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] had the authority to deal directly with WCLS. For instance, if there was a particularly good worker from WCLS whom they wanted to keep, they could offer to pay an extra 25 cents per hour. In addition, they could refuse to take back an unreliable WCLS worker.

b6

Presently there are approximately 350 workers at the 1500 North Hooker facility. Of this number, approximately ten to fifteen are day laborers who work at the paper plant on a daily basis. In addition, the Cicero facility at 38th Street and Laramie Avenue employs approximately one or two laborers per day. They are usually assigned to yard duty which entails general outdoor clean up of the facility. Occasionally the day laborers may be used for portable toilet assembly for outdoor festivals.

Urban Services, [REDACTED] believes is the same company as Reclaim Industries, has the cleaning contract with the Mayor's Office of Special Events for all of the major summer events such as Taste of Chicago, Jazz Festival, and the Air and Water Show. Waste Management is only involved in the Taste of Chicago as a subcontractor for Urban Services. Waste Management supplies trucks and handles the disposal of garbage.

[REDACTED] "Recycle America" as a general term used at Waste Management for various recycling programs. The term may also apply to a site in Alsip, Illinois which was a former Waste Management recycling facility for sorting plastics and cans. The facility is now just a transfer station.

C.I.D. is a Waste Management landfill facility at 138th Street and the Calumet Expressway. There is also a blue bag recycling facility at this location.

FACILITY MAINTENANCE, INC. (TFMI); 4) ERNIE TERRELL, INC. (ETI);

Previously, on [redacted] CPS hired OGDEN ALLY (OGDEN), New York, now known as "UNICO", to conduct a survey regarding the privatization of their custodial operations. ICS was chosen by OGDEN to perform the survey of CPS Region 5. In addition, CCCSC, A & R, TFMI, UNITED BUILDING MAINTENANCE (UBM), AGUIRRE BUILDING

[REDACTED] advised another janitorial services company, WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE (WCM), was not involved in the CPS bid. Further [REDACTED] of WCM told [REDACTED] not to get involved with CPS.

[REDACTED] was a subcontractor on a bid submitted by OGDEN, which also included A & R as a subcontractor, to the [REDACTED] for cleaning [REDACTED] was close with a person who she did not identify at OGDEN who told her that they were bidding on [REDACTED] contract. [REDACTED] identified [REDACTED] After OGDEN failed to win the bid, [REDACTED] asked who got the contract and was told WCM. Thereafter, she made several attempts to contact [REDACTED] at WCM but was unsuccessful in getting through.

b7C

Finally, when [REDACTED] got through to [REDACTED] she was told that [REDACTED] was the subcontractor on [REDACTED] contract and that there was "no room at [REDACTED]". However, in 1997 a joint-venture was formed [REDACTED] for purposes of bidding on City of Chicago buildings (clinics, courts and cultural centers). The joint-venture was called "AIM" and the group held its business meetings at WCM's offices and local restaurants. The group collectively worked on AIM's bid as follows: [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] unidentified female; and WCM, [REDACTED]

Further, [REDACTED] identified the other bidders as follows: A & R, UBM, HCSI, CCCSC, TFMI, and several others. A & R and HCSI were the incumbents although HCSI had been kicked out leaving A & R with the entire contract. The bids were structured by "groupings" and AIM ended up being the lowest bidder on a grouping; however, when the bid was awarded A & R received the entire contract.

b7C

[REDACTED] advised A & R's founder, ANGELO VELASQUEZ, was the minority component of the business and that he had died one or two years earlier. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] indicated that A & R did not change its certification with the City of Chicago from that of an MBE to WBE. As such, at the time the contract was awarded A & R was in the process of being decertified as an MBE. However, the contract was inexplicably delayed four or five months after the bid opening enabling A & R to get recertified as a WBE.

[REDACTED] advised A & R does ninety-five percent (95%) of its business with the City of Chicago including the Daley Center (through property manager [REDACTED] privatized city buildings, Public Building Commission, and property manager U.S. EQUITIES. Further, BLUE CROSS put out a bid for its Wacker Drive/Randolph Street building but did not solicit a bid from A & R. Shortly thereafter, [REDACTED] advised BLUE CROSS was told by an unidentified individual ostensibly with the City of Chicago to get a bid from A & R.

After AIM did not get the city contract, [REDACTED] called [REDACTED] to see if WCM had any other jobs. During their conversation, [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] [REDACTED] became the sole subcontractor for WCM which later partnered with [REDACTED] on the [REDACTED] [REDACTED] did not know the name of the WCM [REDACTED] joint-venture). When asked if [REDACTED] was the only person she worked with at WCM, [REDACTED] advised [REDACTED] worked on the AIM project and signed the contract but did not provide any specifics as to the work she performed. Also, [REDACTED] worked with [REDACTED] (last name unknown), on time reporting.

At the conclusion of the interview, [REDACTED] provided copies of bid sheets from the two CPS janitorial services bids.

[redacted] initially stated that he did not work on any workmen's compensation insurance matters for WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (WCLS) and did not know who handled these matters for WCLS. [redacted] explained that he understood the question to mean who processed workmen's compensation claims and paperwork for WCLS while he was there. Upon further questioning, [redacted]

[redacted] stated that he was initially unsure if the breakdown was by rate per hour or total amount paid to the employees because [redacted]

[redacted] stated that the auditors would then primarily talk to [redacted] asking him [redacted] only a question or two about the WCLS employees or clients.

[redacted] was shown a USF&G INSURANCE (USF&G) "Statement of Earned Premium" dated [redacted] recognized the document as one similar to that [redacted] had used to provide the format for the "corrected" breakdown by payroll in each work classification. [redacted] thought that one of the auditors he met with was a male, but [redacted] could not recall anything else about him. [redacted] stated that he knew that [redacted] had dealt with some auditors from insurance companies in the past, but stated that he did not know what they had done.

[REDACTED] recalled the name [REDACTED] as being an [REDACTED] for the DUFFS and their businesses. [REDACTED] stated that he may have spoken to [REDACTED] a few times, but stated that he did not really deal directly with [REDACTED] or discuss things with him. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] would often deal with [REDACTED] during the time that [REDACTED] was at WCLS. [REDACTED] estimated that [REDACTED] would call WCLS approximately 5-6 times per month and ask for [REDACTED] indicated that he did not know what [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] talked about.

b7C

[REDACTED] was shown a three-page fax, dated August 10, 1995, from [REDACTED] to [REDACTED] identified the handwriting on the cover page as his and stated that he recalled filling out the next two pages at [REDACTED] indicated that he knows the companies on the third page to be WCLS clients. [REDACTED] identified ACE DISPOSAL, CLEARING DISPOSAL, and RECYCLE AMERICA as WASTE MANAGEMENT companies where the WCLS laborers were used primarily as helpers on the garbage trucks. [REDACTED] any WCLS laborers to do clerical work at any of the WASTE MANAGEMENT companies. [REDACTED] identified CONTINENTAL DISTRIBUTORS, JUDGE & DOLPH, UNION LIQUORS, and ROMANO BROTHERS as liquor distributors where he dispatched WCLS' laborers to help on the trucks and provide manual labor in the warehouse. [REDACTED] any WCLS' laborers to do clerical work at any of the liquor distributors. [REDACTED] identified UTILITY WOODS SPECIALISTS and EKCO HOUSEWARES [REDACTED] WCLS laborers to do clean up and warehouse duties. [REDACTED] any WCLS laborers to do clerical work for either UTILITY WOODS SPECIALISTS or EKCO HOUSEWARES. TIHONOW did not recall the name FREEMAN DECORATING COMPANY, but stated that he did know FREEMAN INDUSTRIES as a company who used WCLS laborers to clean up trade shows at McCormick Place.

[REDACTED] recalled thinking at the time he was filling out the August 10, 1995 fax that it was strange that [REDACTED] was having him list WCLS as providing clerical services to these companies, but never said anything to [REDACTED] or anyone else at WCLS. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] would not have liked it if anyone questioned him about something like that. [REDACTED] stated that he recalled faxing the document(s) to [REDACTED] but does not believe he ever talked directly to [REDACTED]

[redacted] about it. [redacted] indicated that he did not recall [redacted] ever telling him why [redacted] needed the information.

[redacted] indicated that he knew that the insurance companies needed to know the nature of the work performed by WCLS employees in order to calculate the amount of the premiums.

[redacted] indicated that it made sense that it cost more money to insure laborers or warehouse employees than it did to insure clerical employees. [redacted] indicated that he understood that by faxing the document indicating that WCLS were engaged in clerical work, it would look like he was involved in a scheme to defraud the insurance companies if the WCLS employees did not perform clerical work or performed significantly less than was stated to the insurance companies. [redacted] indicated that all of the information he got was given to him directly from [redacted] and stated that everything related to the auditors and [redacted] was done at [redacted] direction.

[redacted] indicated that all business decisions related to WCLS were made by [redacted] explained that this included how much to charge for each laborer, how much to pay employees, and how to deal with outsiders like the City of Chicago compliance officers and insurance auditors.

[redacted] stated that he knew [redacted] to be a friend of the DUFF family who occasionally came down to the WCM/WCLS office. [redacted] stated that based on his observations [redacted] and [redacted] were good friends. [redacted] stated that he had seen [redacted] at least 10-15 times in the office, but [redacted] was not a part of any meetings between [redacted] and anyone from the DUFF family. [redacted] stated that [redacted] called [redacted] at the office all the time, but he did not know what they were talking about. [redacted] indicated that he thought that [redacted] worked in the insurance business and that he worked in the same office as [redacted]

[REDACTED] stated that he could not recall exactly which contracts or which unions.

b7c

[REDACTED] recalled that [REDACTED] would make it look like [REDACTED] [REDACTED] took this to mean that [REDACTED] would make it look as though [REDACTED] was involved in [REDACTED] explained that he thought that this was the case for several reasons. First,

[REDACTED] stated that he believed that the DUFFS, [REDACTED] had someone in the City of Chicago providing them information on what to bid for certain contracts. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] was talking about needing to lower bids and talking about other companies bids. [REDACTED] stated that these conversations and phone calls took place in 1994, 1995, and possibly 1993. [REDACTED] stated that based on conversations he had overheard, he also got the impression that the DUFFS had contacts in the Cook County Sheriff's Office. [REDACTED] stated that he did not know who that contact was either. [REDACTED] knew that the DUFFS had a relationship with [REDACTED] but he was not privy to their conversations with [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] would come into WCLS/WCM occasionally and go into the conference room with individuals from the DUFF family, including [REDACTED] JACK DUFF, JR (also known as "JACK DUFF, SR").

b7c

[REDACTED] stated that he also knew that WCM had gotten contracts with Navy Pier, O'Hare Airport, and the Harold Washington Library at various times [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] recalled being asked by [REDACTED]

_____ stated that he often provided these envelopes to JACK DUFF, JR and occasionally to _____. _____ stated that he never knew exactly how much was in the envelopes because _____ sealed them. _____ stated that he knew there was money in the envelopes because JACK DUFF, JR., and sometimes _____ would often open the sealed envelopes _____

[REDACTED] recalled that there were many phone lines coming into the WCM/WCLS offices, but they were not dedicated to one business or the other. [REDACTED] stated that everyone just answered "Windy City" or "Good Morning" because they did not know who someone would be calling for.

[REDACTED] stated that he was aware that the DUFF family had "truckfuls" of liquor and wine that they would pass out to their friends, usually around Christmas. [REDACTED] indicated that he knew that it was "truckfuls" for several reasons. [REDACTED] indicated that [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] also stated that it took several people an entire Saturday to pass it out and indicated that he had overheard conversations in which [REDACTED] was talking about the liquor. [REDACTED] estimated that the DUFFS could have approximately [REDACTED] cases at one time and stated that they kept [REDACTED] cases in the office at times. [REDACTED] recalled that [REDACTED] Last Name [REDACTED]

Unknown (LNU) [REDACTED] [REDACTED] could not recall any of the people he had given the liquor/wine to on behalf of the DUFFS. [REDACTED] stated that he saw [REDACTED] in the WCM/WCLS a few times during the time that he [REDACTED] worked there, but indicated that [REDACTED] did not work in the WCM/WCLS office on a regular basis.

[REDACTED] stated that he was aware that [REDACTED] had to periodically meet with auditors or compliance officers from the City of Chicago regarding the certification of WCM as a woman business enterprise (WBE). [REDACTED] indicated that [REDACTED] always knew 7-10 days ahead of time when the auditors/compliance officers were coming out to the business. [REDACTED] stated that before the auditors/compliance officers came out, [REDACTED] would tell everyone to clean up the office so that there were only WCM materials around. [REDACTED] characterized what took place as [REDACTED] "playing a game" with the certification process. [REDACTED] explained that everyone in the office knew that [REDACTED] ran the company and [REDACTED] rarely came in to the WCM/WCLS office. [REDACTED] stated that despite the fact that it was common knowledge that [REDACTED] did not come into the office, [REDACTED] told everyone to tell the City auditors/compliance officers that the office that [REDACTED] used was [REDACTED] office. [REDACTED] worked at another Duff company, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

After Christmas of her first year at WCLS, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] returned to WCLS she was given more responsibilities, including taking care of a [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] did not have signatory power on these two accounts either.

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] is not certain as to how many months out of the year the Duffs were in Florida because they traveled back and forth between Chicago and Florida often. Occasionally [REDACTED] saw [REDACTED] in the office at 178 North Halsted, but John Duff was in the office more often. [REDACTED] also did personal errands for [REDACTED] such as finding [REDACTED] that [REDACTED] wanted. If [REDACTED] needed money to do anything for [REDACTED] [REDACTED] would then give her checks made out to cash which [REDACTED] would cash at the currency exchange next door to the office.

[REDACTED] and Stinson also cashed checks for [REDACTED] at the currency exchange. [REDACTED] described the check cashing as a "daily ritual" and estimated that the practice occurred every other day. [REDACTED] herself cashed checks made out to [REDACTED] her to go next door to the currency exchange and cash them.

[REDACTED] would then give the money to [REDACTED] was responsible for taking care of [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] also did errands for [REDACTED] such as buying [REDACTED] needed money for these things he would cash a check from [REDACTED] in the same manner that [REDACTED] did for [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that JOHN DUFF, JR. [REDACTED] would come into the WCLS office, but not as much as [REDACTED] stated that JOHN DUFF, JR. would usually come into the office in the afternoon to play cards during the week. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] would usually come in with JOHN DUFF, JR. or meet him at the office. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] would occasionally come into the office. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] did not know anything about the day-to-day operation of WCLS, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] would tell everyone to "take it easy" on [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he knew that the name [REDACTED] was on the WCLS and WCM checks, but he did not know why. [REDACTED] stated that he also knew that a [REDACTED] signature stamp was used on the checks from WCM and WCLS.

[REDACTED] stated that JOHN DUFF, JR. [REDACTED] were often in Florida or at their ranch house in Land O'Lakes, Wisconsin. [REDACTED] stated that he had heard in the office that the "Duffs" had business interests in Florida, but stated that he was never directly involved and did not know the exact nature of those business interests. [REDACTED] stated that he also thought that the "Duffs" had some unknown business interests in Detroit.

[REDACTED] described the WCLS employees as "industrial labor supply" who were primarily truck helpers. [REDACTED] explained that WCLS' biggest clients were liquor distributors, including ROMANO BROTHERS, JUDGE & DOLPH, CONSOLIDATED, CONTINENTAL DISTRIBUTORS, and FEDERATED. [REDACTED] indicated that the majority of work done by WCLS' laborers for the liquor distributors was assisting liquor distributor drivers in loading their trucks at the warehouses and unloading their trucks at client locations. [REDACTED] stated that WCLS was sending between 300-800 total laborers out [REDACTED] stated that none of the laborers did clerical work, but simply did manual labor.

[REDACTED] stated that the "Duffs" had long-standing ties to the liquor distributors through the employee union, Local 3.

[REDACTED] stated that he knew that [REDACTED] with Local 3, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] who was a long-time friend of JOHN DUFF, Jr., had also [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he is aware that JOHN DUFF, JR. was in prison for something related to unions and that as part of his release he is not allowed to have any dealings with unions.

[REDACTED] stated that JOHN DUFF, JR. abides by this restriction and is very careful not to have any dealings with unions.

[REDACTED] stated that he has heard around the office that JOHN DUFF, JR. assisted [REDACTED] but indicated that he does not know exactly how.

[REDACTED] indicated that he is not aware of the "Duffs" threatening anyone or attempting to intimidate them. [REDACTED] indicated that he is aware that the "Duffs" have a reputation of being involved with organized crime, but stated that he does not have any direct knowledge of this.

[REDACTED] stated that he also worked [REDACTED] for the "Duffs" while he was working at WCLS. [REDACTED] explained that he would [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] explained that he would also perform [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] explained that he also [REDACTED] estimated that WCM started sometime between 1991 and 1993. [REDACTED] stated that WCM was formed very quickly right before the "Duffs" were able to get contracts with the City of Chicago to clean the Harold Washington Library, O'Hare International Terminal No. 5, and a 911 Building. [REDACTED] stated that it happened so quickly that WCM used the WCLS labor workforce to handle the contracts for the first year before there was independent hiring for WCM. [REDACTED] indicated that prior to these contracts, the "Duffs" dealings with the City of Chicago were through the Grant Park ethnic festivals.

[REDACTED] stated that he worked for WCM by coordinating shifts and schedules from the WCLS workforce. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] but JOHN DUFF, JR. [REDACTED] were around from time to time. [REDACTED] stated that he reported directly to [REDACTED] on WCM matters.

[REDACTED] stated that when the "Duffs" were forming REM,

[REDACTED] also recalled that [REDACTED] brought in a white male, [REDACTED] Last Name Unknown (LNU), who had some knowledge about environmental matters and tried to help them get REM going. [REDACTED] stated that [REDACTED] LNU understanding of what REM was doing was digging holes for and placing underground gas tanks in within environmental standards. [REDACTED] stated that REM did not really get going right away and was inactive for some time after it initially started. [REDACTED] stated that REM then came back and started getting business, including the "Blue Bag" contracts with the City of Chicago. [REDACTED] recalled that REM had approximately 4-6 clients, but he could not recall the names of the clients.

b7C

[REDACTED] stated that once all of the companies were formed, including WCLS, WCM, REM, and CURTIS, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that if there was a problem or a conflict, he would do whatever the "Duffs" told him to do.

[REDACTED] stated the "Duffs" had been good to him and acknowledged that he did not want to incriminate them. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] did not know if that was given to [REDACTED] or not.
[REDACTED] estimated that this was done in the early 1990s.
[REDACTED] indicated that none of the work included in the payroll breakdown was clerical. [REDACTED] related that he provides this type of information for [REDACTED] [REDACTED] but indicated that he was not really aware of it when he worked at WCLS. [REDACTED] did not recall having any dealings with insurance auditors while he worked at WCLS or any of the other "Duff" companies. [REDACTED] was unsure who did this at WCLS.

b6
b7c

[REDACTED] stated that he knew that the "Duffs" had someone telling them where to come in on the contracts they were bidding on with the City of Chicago. [REDACTED] explained that he had heard [REDACTED] JOHN DUFF, JR., and [REDACTED] talking on various occasions about someone at the City of Chicago telling them what what everyone had bid or where there numbers should be. [REDACTED] indicated that he did not know who at the City was providing the "Duffs" with the information. [REDACTED] knew that the "Duffs" had contact with KATHY OSTERMAN in the Mayor's Office of Special Events on the ethnic festivals.

[REDACTED] stated that the "Duffs" also knew [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] stated that he knew that [REDACTED] had worked in the [REDACTED] recalled seeing [REDACTED] in the WCLS/WCM office from time to time talking to one of the "Duffs." [REDACTED] also recalled seeing [REDACTED] at the "Duffs" Christmas parties at the COMO INN.

b7C

[REDACTED] indicated that he attended the "Duffs" Christmas parties almost every year he worked for them. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] recalled seeing Chicago Mayor RICHARD DALEY at that Christmas party.

[REDACTED] stated that it was "customary" for the "Duffs" to have their employees pick up liquor from the various liquor distributors once a year around Christmas. [REDACTED] stated that he or other WCLS/WCM employees would do this at the direction of [REDACTED] stated that it was "high class" liquor that was passed out as gifts to the "Duff's" friends and employees, used at the COMO INN Christmas parties, or kept by the "Duffs." [REDACTED] stated that some of the friends included a [REDACTED] (phonetic), a [REDACTED] LNU, a [REDACTED] LNU, and an unknown male with the last name of [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] estimated that each year there was enough liquor to fill up a "semi or two" and [REDACTED] stated that most of the liquor was stored [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] was kept at the WCM/WCLS office at 178 North Hastad.

[REDACTED] described the WCM/WCLS office as being an older, run down office that was very open. [REDACTED] stated that the door to 174 North Halstand was used by the laborers and led to a small room with a window where they could check in. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he had seen some strange things at the various companies the "Duffs" owned dealing with money and taxes. [REDACTED] recalled from [REDACTED] instructed all of the WCLS laborers to file "exempt" on their W-2s. [REDACTED] stated that the "Duffs" always made a big deal about the W-2s for the [REDACTED] recalled a specific instance where he was instructed to pull all of the W-2s for [REDACTED] stated that the "Duffs" were also very secretive about how much they were making with the companies.

[REDACTED] stated that he knew that the "Duffs" gambled quite a bit, but stated that he had never heard of them running an illegal gambling operation. [REDACTED] recalled that one of the [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that he had seen some of the news about the City of Chicago revoking WCM's WBE status, but had not talked to anyone from the City or from the "Duff" businesses about it. [REDACTED] stated that he did not recall ever having any contact with City compliance officers while he worked for the "Duffs."

[REDACTED] stated that he knew that WCLS' laborers were used on recycling projects at WASTE MANAGEMENT, ACE DISPOSAL, and CID. [REDACTED] stated that he also thought that BARRY might have worked with CURTIS STORAGE & TRUCKING.

b7C

[REDACTED] stated that CURTIS STORAGE & TRUCKING was a "Duff" company with a fleet of 15-20 old, beat up trucks. [REDACTED] stated that the CURTIS trucks were used to take processed garbage from ACE DISPOSAL and WASTE MANAGEMENT sites to landfills. [REDACTED] stated that CURTIS also had contracts with the City of Chicago moving salt. [REDACTED] stated that he remembered this because the trucks were not designed to carry salt [REDACTED]

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 12/21/2000

[redacted]
[redacted] telephone [redacted] was interviewed at [redacted] [redacted] After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agent and the purpose of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] advised that he had been employed by CASUALTY INSURANCE, which later became FREMONT INSURANCE, from approximately [redacted] (hereinafter "CASUALTY/FREMONT").
[redacted] advised that he worked [redacted] for CASUALTY/FREMONT from [redacted]
[redacted] before leaving in approximately [redacted] [redacted] advised that he then worked briefly for [redacted] and has worked for [redacted] (hereinafter [redacted])

b6
b7C

[redacted] advised that he recalled CASUALTY/FREMONT providing worker's compensation insurance to a company named WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE (hereinafter "WCLS") while he was the [redacted] recalled that WCLS was a temporary labor service, but did not recall anything more specific about the individuals that owned or worked at the company. [redacted] advised that he did not know and had never met anyone named JOHN DUFF, [redacted] advised that it would have been unusual for someone in underwriting to have direct contact with the insured party, rather than the insured's agent. [redacted] advised that normally it would just be auditors who had direct dealings with the insured party. [redacted] advised that he did not recognize the name [redacted] but he recognized the name [redacted] as someone he had dealt with in the insurance industry.

[redacted] advised that one of the reasons he remembered
WCLS was a conversation that he had with [redacted] [redacted] about the account. [redacted] recalled that during this conversation, [redacted] related to him that someone at WCLS had threatened to break an auditor's legs because of problems during the audit. [redacted] further related to [redacted] that after that incident, CASUALTY/FREMONT conducted audits the way the owners of WCLS told them to. [redacted] advised that this conversation took place during the time that [REDACTED] was working in [REDACTED] was aware that [REDACTED] worked at or for [REDACTED] during the time he was in [REDACTED] but [REDACTED] did not recall discussing WCLS with either of them.

After reviewing portions of the CASUALTY/FREMONT underwriting file on WCLS, [REDACTED] indicated that while he did not have a lot of independent recollections of his dealings with WCLS, he recognized many of the documents as CASUALTY/FREMONT documents and they helped refresh his memory on some of his dealings with WCLS. [REDACTED] indicated that he also recognized his handwriting on many of the documents.

b7C

[REDACTED] reviewed a document labeled "AUDIT ADJUSTMENT," dated November 11, 1994, which showed $600,000 in a Warehousing classification, 8292, for CASUALTY's worker's compensation policy for WCLS for the period of 07/05/93 to 07/05/94. The document stated that it was an "estimated audit" and indicated that a "revised audit [would] be issued when the payroll records are made available." [REDACTED] related that the estimated audit was sent out when an insured party was not complying with a final audit. [REDACTED] indicated that deciding to put the $600,000 into warehousing, as opposed to some other classification, could have been based on claims they were getting or because it was the highest classification that the insured party was using. [REDACTED] advised that whatever the reason, the estimated audit was designed to get the insured to cooperate with the audit. [REDACTED] advised that if the insured party simply paid the estimated audit, then the carrier would definitely want to schedule a physical audit because it probably meant that the insured was not properly reporting their classifications or payroll.

b7C

[REDACTED] recognized the address of 174-178 North Halstad, Chicago, Illinois as the address of a company named REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (REM). [REDACTED] advised that he [REDACTED] on REM's workers compensation insurance policy with [REDACTED] approximately three months earlier. [REDACTED] advised that he did not recall seeing any WCLS signage at the address when he conducted the audit survey. [REDACTED] explained that an audit survey consisted of an auditor checking the classifications of a business' employees and their record keeping. [REDACTED] explained that it was customary for TRAVELERS to do an audit survey on new business to ensure the insured party was properly classifying their employees and keeping adequate payroll records for workers compensation purposes.

[REDACTED] advised that the audit of REM took place at 174-178 North Halstad, Chicago, Illinois. [REDACTED] advised that he was assisted with the audit by a [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] was the [REDACTED] of REM or a similar position. [REDACTED] advised that he knew the name [REDACTED] REM, but advised that he had never met [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] advised that during the course of the audit he learned that REM had two divisions, a "day labor" division, which TRAVELERS insured through the assigned risk market, and another division, which another company insured in the voluntary market. [REDACTED] recalled that the "day labor" division of REM was primarily classified as warehouse workers and estimated that the total payroll was approximately $1.6 million based on the quarterly payroll information. [REDACTED] indicated that REM's experience modifier was approximately 1.04, indicating an average loss history given their employee classifications.

[REDACTED] advised that there were approximately 5-10 people in the office at REM during the audit, including [REDACTED] a female receptionist, a temporary computer person, and some others he did not meet.

[REDACTED] was shown correspondence, dated June 28, 2000, from [REDACTED] indicating that REM had acquired WCLS' operations. [REDACTED] stated that he was not told during the audit that WCLS had been merged into or acquired by REM. [REDACTED] stated that for worker's compensation purposes, WCLS' experience modifier should have been carried over to REM if the "day labor" division was insured separately. [REDACTED] stated that even if all of the loss history, payroll, and classifications for both divisions were merged, the NCCI would have used the old WCLS experience modifier and loss history to create one new experience modifier for REM which incorporated the WCLS acquisition. [REDACTED] indicated that REM should have indicated in their record to the NCCI that REM had acquired WCLS and indicated any common ownership or acquisition. [REDACTED] indicated that he did not recall seeing this on any documents he used before or received during the audit. [REDACTED] advised that he would not ordinarily ask about common ownership during an audit unless something triggered the question. [REDACTED] advised that the underwriting department would ask and advised that the documents, including an acord, asking such questions would be in TRAVELERS' underwriting files.

[REDACTED] advised that it was a common form of insurance fraud to create a new company to avoid a very high experience modifier. [REDACTED] related that it was uncommon to see experience modifiers as high as 3.0 or higher. [REDACTED] indicated that if a company was intentionally misclassifying their payroll into a clerical classification when it was supposed to be in a warehousing classification, even a modifier as high as 3.0 won't make up for the premium that should have been paid. [REDACTED] advised that the best way for insurance companies to avoid years of fraud leading to a high modifier is to "verify claims" by checking the nature of the work being done, talk to the people where it was being done, and put the employees in their proper payroll classifications. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] advised that CASUALTY/FREMONT was not properly handling worker's compensation risks, especially in the assigned risk market. [REDACTED] advised that the underwriting department at CASUALTY/FREMONT consisted of [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] worked in collections. [REDACTED] advised that CASUALTY/FREMONT was understaffed in underwriting and they were doing everything manually. [REDACTED] stated that CASUALTY's management was not committed to putting an updated computer system in place or getting more people to do the underwriting on assigned risk work. [REDACTED] indicated that the NCCI also wanted final audits done within 90 days of the end of the policy and CASUALTY/FREMONT was rushed to do these. [REDACTED] advised that the NCCI only audited a carrier every few years and only a small percentage of their files were reviewed. [REDACTED] indicated that this allowed CASUALTY/FREMONT to continue to make mistakes for years on assigned risk policies. [REDACTED] advised that neither CASUALTY/FREMONT nor the NCCI had a system for any kind of day-to-day review of underwriting and auditing. [REDACTED] advised that the NCCI would not know if a particular company had been audited from year to year unless an audit card was filed by the servicing

_____

_____ advised that during a normal audit he would ask to be provided with any payroll information, state unemployment records, IRS Form 941s (quarterly payroll), check registers.

b6
b7C

_____ added that with day labor services he would also ask for break down their payroll into classifications. If this was not done, _____ advised that he would ask for client lists and invoices in order to tie the payroll breakdown back into the 941s after taking out any profit.

_____ advised that when he conducted an audit, he normally only submitted a final report to TRAVELERS. _____ indicated that he ordinarily kept the underlying documents supporting the audit for six months to a year before destroying them. _____ advised that he still had the documents from the audit of REM. _____ advised that _____

_____

_____ advised that _____ (phonetic) of _____ could obtain all of the documents from REM's worker's compensation policies.

b6
b7C

_____ advised that in the assigned risk market, there was no actual risk to the assigned risk carriers. _____ explained that the NATIONAL COUNCIL ON COMPENSATION INSURANCE (NCCI) contracted with the State of Illinois to create and monitor an assigned risk worker's compensation market for companies that could not obtain insurance in the voluntary market. _____ related that the NCCI would assign various companies to be handled by the servicing carriers. _____ stated that while the servicing carriers would collect the premiums and any other fees and pay the claims, they would only receive a flat fee from the NCCI for the business, rather than profiting or losing money based on the premium collected and the claims paid out. _____ related that the NCCI would pay any losses and receive credit for premiums that exceeded the fees paid to the servicing carriers in the assigned risk market. [REDACTED] stated that the NCCI would then levy a surcharge on all insurance carriers, not just assigned risk carriers, if the losses for a particular year were too high. [REDACTED] related that in addition to assigning carriers, the NCCI also calculated and assigned experience modifiers, established rates for each worker's compensation classification, and established advisory rates for certain classifications.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] advised that there was formerly many companies that participated as servicing carriers in the assigned risk market, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] advised that this changed occurred 5-6 years ago when the NCCI went to a bid process for who was going to get the assigned risk business.

_____ thought _____ and JOHN DUFF, JR. ran the day to day operations of WCLS but that _____ was the owner of WCLS. The reason _____ thought _____ name was on all the documentation. While _____ worked for WCLS she never saw _____ in the office. _____ did not think there was anything wrong with _____ not being in the office. Whenever _____ received a telephone call, _____

_____ knew _____ and would see him in the WCLS office around lunch time but did not think _____ had anything to do with WCLS. During the festivals, however, _____ would see _____ working the festival. _____ knew _____ did not have any involvement with WCLS. Like _____ did see _____ working the festivals. _____ knew _____ did not work for WCLS or WINDY CITY MAINTENANCE (hereafter referred to as WCM).

After RICHARD DALEY was elected mayor in 1990, "the DUFF's" started another company, WCM. _____ did not know that much about WCM and did not know who the owner was. _____ believed WCM was started when WCM received the festival contracts but WCM was not prepared to handle the clean up of the festivals. WCM did not have the necessary supplies or equipment and needed to use WCLS day laborers to meet the manpower needs. _____ was not sure who "the DUFF's" dealt with at the city but she did know _____ knew _____ did know _____

_____ recalled seeing a REMEDIAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANPOWER (hereafter referred to as R.E.M.) sign outside the WCLS/WCM office at 178 North Halsted as well as business documents with R.E.M. letterhead. _____ told _____ that R.E.M. was an old company that did not work out. [REDACTED] knew R.E.M. was owned by "the DUFF's".

[REDACTED] never saw any cases of liquor at WCLS but she did recall that around Christmas time hearing "the DUFF's" talk about liquor. [REDACTED] was not sure what the context of the conversation was but thought that maybe "the DUFF's" gave the liquor away as gifts.

[REDACTED] was hired by [REDACTED] and began working at WCLS. [REDACTED] however, was unsure when [REDACTED] started at WCLS. [REDACTED] was involved with the [REDACTED] at WCLS and helped "the DUFF's" get WCLS [REDACTED] then went to [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] worked for [REDACTED] (probably [REDACTED]) [REDACTED] did not know [REDACTED] last name. [REDACTED] was not sure what year but [REDACTED] was offered a position at [REDACTED] by "the DUFF's". At that time, [REDACTED] had moved to [REDACTED] and did not want to drive that far every day. [REDACTED] thought "the DUFF's" were harassing [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] noticed that [REDACTED] [REDACTED] did not know how long that had been going on. [REDACTED] thought it might have been four years. [REDACTED] first learned of the past tax problems and [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] also [REDACTED] after he started working for WCLS. [REDACTED] affected his job performance, [REDACTED] knew of occasions when [REDACTED] would not show up at home or work for days at a time. "The DUFF's" knew [REDACTED] and even though he did not show up for work, "the DUFF's" still paid him his weekly wages. [REDACTED] remembered calling [REDACTED] assistance in getting [REDACTED]

The last time [REDACTED] had any contact with "the DUFF's", she had contacted WCM in [REDACTED] and talked to [REDACTED]. The reason [REDACTED] called was [REDACTED] the TASTE OF CHICAGO because [REDACTED] denied ever being threatened by anyone when [REDACTED] was not aware of any criminal activity going on at WCLS but she did say something was just not right. [REDACTED] said "the DUFF's had an air about them" and recalled telling her mom that she [REDACTED] worked for the Irish Mob. [REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] called her last Friday and told her that she should expect a visit from the FBI. [REDACTED] was on his way home from his meeting with the Assistant United States Attorney's.) According to [REDACTED] did not provide her with anymore details other than to expect a visit. [redacted] understanding of REM's operations is that REM runs recycling projects for the city of Chicago.

Sometime later [redacted] went out of business. [redacted] went to work as [redacted] for United Heartland. As Superior National was out of business, [redacted] had to find a new market for REM's workers compensation coverage. [redacted] did not have a contract with United Heartland, but [redacted] did. [redacted] brought the REM account to [redacted] to find a market for it and [redacted] brought it to United Heartland. [redacted] had worked with [redacted] of [redacted] previously on other accounts and she began working on REM's account at United Heartland.

[REDACTED] of REM and a female whose name [REDACTED] could not recall. [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that many of REM's employees are long-term and they are provided with good benefits.

[REDACTED] was shown a copy of a fax dated 9/5/00 in which [REDACTED] states that [REDACTED] has received an "app for the new accounts." [REDACTED] explained that [REDACTED] was referring to receiving an application to add the former Windy City Labor Service (WCLS) day labor division to the REM policy. [REDACTED] understanding from [REDACTED] was that REM was buying the contracts of WCLS which was going out of business. [REDACTED] was not under the impression that WCLS and REM were merging.

[REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that she would need an ERM-14 filled out by WCLS in order to consider adding the day labor division onto REM's account. This was needed in order to have the National Council on Compensation Insurance (NCCI) determine if the two companies were combinable in terms of their experience modifier. [REDACTED] recalls that WCLS had a poor loss history. [REDACTED] was also concerned with how losses would be broken down between the two divisions, especially regarding what [REDACTED] had explained on the day of the facility tour. In particular, [REDACTED] was concerned about the Romano Brothers account as [REDACTED] explained that the day laborers would be helping the drivers actually employed by Romano Brothers. [REDACTED] thought this would cause problems in determining how any losses would be apportioned between insurance companies.

[REDACTED] did not receive the ERM-14 which she had requested and she repeatedly asked [REDACTED] to get it. She did receive an ERM-14 for REM, but this did not provide her with the necessary information on WCLS. It seemed to [REDACTED] that [REDACTED] was having trouble getting the form from the insured. [REDACTED] contacted the NCCI because she had so many questions as to how to work the account. The NCCI representative suggested that [REDACTED] request a narrative from the insured explaining the connection between WCLS and REM. [REDACTED] requested that [REDACTED] obtain such a narrative from the insured, but she never received one. As she never received the narrative or the ERM-14, she did not have enough information to add the day labor division onto the REM policy.

The REM account at United Heartland is a retro account which means that it is a loss sensitive account. Depending upon what the losses are at the time of the audit, the insured may either get money refunded to them or the insured may owe additional premium. This was the first retro account that United Heartland had ever written and this made it even more complicated for  to add the day labor division onto REM's account.

The WCLS office opened at 5:00am and clients usually called by 6:00am to make arrangements for the temporary workers that they needed for the day. When [redacted] started at WCLS, there were no computers being utilized to keep track of the number of workers needed by each client. Sometimes an erasable board was used to keep track of the clients' calls, but usually tickets were written out as the calls came in and workers were assigned. [redacted] described the office as in an old, decrepit building. The office has a raised platform from which to overlook the pool of temporary workers and there is a bar in the back. Sometime after [redacted] started at WCLS, additional space next to the office was acquired and the office was expanded.

[REDACTED] is aware that [REDACTED] [REDACTED] believes that John Duff Jr. cannot have any union dealings because of a prior conviction and thus he could not have [REDACTED] be elected to a union position. [REDACTED] overheard John Duff Jr. on the telephone asking a union official if it would be okay for him to be present at the installation of [REDACTED] so [REDACTED] knows that John Duff Jr. is very careful not to have any union dealings. [REDACTED] is aware that Local 3 represents liquor warehouse workers and he assumed that WCLS was hired for warehouse work because of this association.

b7C

Additional clients of WCLS include [REDACTED] [REDACTED] After Windy City Maintenance (WCM) was started, WCLS workers were used as needed for various WCM projects. WCLS workers were mainly used for WCM's short term projects. WCLS workers were not used at WCM's contracts at the Harold Washington Library, the 911 Building, or O'Hare International Terminal No.5. [REDACTED] has no firsthand knowledge of how these contracts with the city of Chicago were won by WCM. Prior to getting these contracts, WCM was not a sizeable operation. As the contracts came in, WCM expanded as various projects needed to be staffed. [REDACTED] does not know who at WCM handled contract matters or how the contracts were obtained.

[REDACTED] on any matters regarding WCM. [REDACTED] was not involved in WCM's operations.

[REDACTED] denied that anyone in the Duff family ever offered to make him the owner of Remedial Environmental Manpower (REM). [REDACTED] is not aware that WCM or REM were Minority Business Enterprises (MBE) that were certified as such by the city of Chicago. [REDACTED] knows that [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] to a meeting at the Halsted Street office in which [REDACTED] was introduced as [REDACTED]. This meeting occurred in the late 1980's or early 1990's and [REDACTED] Stinson, [REDACTED] were present.

[REDACTED] perception is that the Duffs originally owned REM, but at some point [REDACTED] does not know when or why this happened. [REDACTED] assumes that the Duffs can exert control over REM, but he is not certain as to why. [REDACTED] Last Name Unknown initially ran [REDACTED] of REM when it was first formed.

[REDACTED] has no knowledge of REM's Blue Bag Recycling contract with the city of Chicago.

b6
b7C

When working at WCLS, WCM, REM, or Curtis Trucking and Storage, [REDACTED] was usually instructed as to what to do by Stinson or [REDACTED]. # Duffs face rivals for McPier contract

By Laurie Cohen
Tribune staff reporter

The agency that manages McCormick Place and Navy Pier plans to seek competitive bids for janitorial service rather than extend a multimillion-dollar agreement with a controversial cleaning firm.

Windy City Maintenance, which has taken in $50.7 million from the janitorial contract in the past five years, is run by the politically connected Duff family. The Tribune has reported that federal authorities are investigating whether the Duffs violated labor laws and defrauded a Chicago program intended to benefit minorities and women.

Directors of the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority voted Wednesday to seek competitive bids to make sure the agency is paying a reasonable price for cleaning services and not because of any alleged misconduct by the Duffs, officials said.

"At this point, all there are are allegations," said board chairman Kelly Welsh.

Board members also took action on another high-profile contract, awarding a five-year food service agreement at McCormick Place worth about $120 million to Chicago-based Levy Restaurants. Levy, which has held the pact since 1991 in a partnership with minority vendors Tim and Everett Rand, was among four groups vying for the business.

The authority said it would conduct a formal review of Levy's performance after 30 months.

A vote on the janitorial contract had been stalled since April, when staff members praised Windy City's work and recommended that it get a three-year contract extension. Instead, the board decided to survey cleaning costs at other convention centers.

On Wednesday, citing difficulties in determining janitorial costs elsewhere, the board members extended Windy City's contract through February to give the agency time to solicit bids. James Streicker, an attorney for the Duffs, had no immediate comment on whether Windy City plans to bid on the new contract.

The Tribune reported in 1999 that Windy City had reaped tens of millions of dollars as a woman-owned business even though it was run by the men in the Duff family, some of whom have connections to organized crime. The Duffs have held fundraisers for Mayor Richard Daley and provided campaign workers for Daley-backed candidates.

The Duffs also control a union known as Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Warehousemen, Clerical, Distillery, Rectifying, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union Local 3. The Tribune investigation showed that a separate day-labor company run by the Duffs was undermining the union by providing cheap, non-union labor to the city's major liquor distributors.

After the disclosures, the city concluded that Windy City had improperly claimed it was controlled by a woman, and the firm became ineligible for about $1 million in contracts under the city's minority set-aside program. Windy City has lost other city business in the past year, including janitorial work at the Harold Washington Library and the International Terminal at O'Hare International Airport.

Remedial Environmental Manpower, a company founded by the Duffs and now run by one of their associates, still holds a lucrative garbage-sorting subcontract as part of the city's Blue Bag recycling program.

Windy City won the janitorial contract at McCormick Place and Navy Pier in 1996, after an unusual bidding process. Three rivals initially submitted lower bids. But after all the finalists met with authority officials and revised their proposals, Windy City became the low bidder.

The company actually was paid $10.6 million the first year—nearly $4 million more than its winning proposal. Last year its bill came to $11.3 million.

In other action, the board also voted to install 62 defibrillators at McCormick Place, replacing three machines that had been in use. Such lifesaving devices, which deliver an electric shock that restarts a heart in cardiac arrest, already have been installed in other public sites, including O'Hare and Midway Airports.

Authority officials said the defibrillators will cost $3,000 each and will be within a two-minute walk of any point in the complex, making them readily available in emergencies.

Re: Windy City Labor Service, Inc.

Dear [redacted]

[redacted] for Kemper Insurance, asked that I refer the following to your attention. It is my understanding that you have an interest in members of the Duff family.

Kemper Insurance is a major property and casualty insurance carrier whose home office is located in Long Grove, Illinois. Approximately 60% of Kemper's business is the provision of workers' compensation insurance which is handled through the collection of premiums from our insured's.

The following report pertains to the efforts made by Kemper Insurance to conduct an audit of the accounting records of Windy City Labor Service in order to determine the appropriate workers' compensation insurance premiums for the period July 5, 1998 to July 5, 1999. In the effort to determine those premiums, Kemper Insurance has uncovered questionable activity on the part of the management of Windy City Labor Service, Inc. A summary of the events leading to this point is attached.

Windy City Labor Service, Inc. of Chicago, Illinois was unable to procure workers' compensation insurance coverage in the voluntary market, so they applied to the Illinois assigned risk market. The coverage was assigned to Kemper Insurance through the assigned risk plan and a policy (Policy #3BA-093027-00) was issued to provide the coverage to Windy City Labor Service effective July 5, 1998.

b7C

At the time the policy was issued, Windy City Labor Service, Inc. based their estimated premium on 200 employees of which it was indicated over 90% of these employees would be performing clerical type duties. Windy City Labor Service represented their estimated annual payroll to be over $2,000,000.

159A-CG-110953-177

Representatives of Windy City Labor Service have failed to cooperate with Kemper Insurance and allow our auditors the opportunity to conduct an audit. As a result of this failure, Kemper Insurance has been unable to determine an exact premium due for the policy period.

However, through investigation of their operation, we have been able to determine that Windy City Labor Service has misrepresented the work performed by their employees. Windy City Labor Service is a day labor service specializing in the production of non-skilled employees in warehouse and delivery settings. The large majority of the employees which Windy City Labor Service and their insurance agent have represented as clerical employees are actually working in warehouse settings loading trucks and participating in the delivery of merchandise.

Based upon the information developed, Kemper Insurance has determined that Windy City Labor Service should have paid over $300,000 in workers' compensation insurance premiums to Kemper during this period while having actually paid $56,695. The damages estimate is based upon an analysis of the information received to date. Windy City Labor Service is providing warehouse employees to several customers in the Chicago area. The least expensive available warehouse classification was used in lieu of the clerical classification. It is very likely that more expensive classifications will apply to the payroll which in turn will increase the damages estimate.

b7C

The attached summary and information outlines Kemper's business relationship with Windy City Labor Service. If after review of these documents you need additional information from our files, please contact me at [REDACTED]

Sincerely,

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

WORKERS' COMPENSATION INSURANCE:

The following is a brief explanation of the workers' compensation insurance system in the Illinois Assigned Risk Market and how it is supposed to be operated. Due to intention of making workers' compensation insurance available to all employers in Illinois, it is possible for some employers to manipulate the system in order to pay less premium than they truly owe.

Workers' compensation insurance is intended to provide insurance coverage to the employees of a company in the case of a work related injury. Because an insurance carriers' exposure is determined by the number of employees that a company has as well as the type of work performed by those employees, the workers' compensation insurance premiums are calculated using the following criteria:

1. An employee's total payroll subject to various criteria
2. The type of work performed by the employee
3. The state set rate for the type of work performed.

There are over 600 workers' compensation insurance classification used to define the type of work performed by the various industries in Illinois. These classifications range from the least expensive such as clerical only operations (work exclusively in an office handling paper work, phones, etc) to the construction trades (such as roofing, carpentry, plumbing, etc). Common sense would indicate that the insurance rate for a secretary (clerical) would be much lower than the insurance rate for a roofer. There is a much larger likelihood of injury as well as a much larger likelihood of serious injury to the roofer than there is to the secretary.

The following example will illustrate the difference in premium faced by a company made up entirely of secretaries vs. a company made up entirely of roofers.

Secretarial Firm:

Total Payroll	$100,000
Insurance Rate	.36%
Total Premium	$360

Roofing Firm:

Total Payroll	$100,000
Insurance Rate	36.46%
Total Premium	$36,460

As can be seen from this example, the insurance rate for a roofer is much higher than it is for a clerical person in Illinois. A roofing company that honestly rates their employees will pay 100 times more for their workers' compensation insurance than a company made up entirely of secretaries.

Workers' compensation insurance carriers rely upon the insured to provide an honest assessment of their operations including a full description of the type of work performed by each employee. The example provided indicates how lucrative it can be to purposefully misclassify their employees. It is made simpler by temporary labor contractors, since they provide employees to several different customers. The temporary labor contractor can report those employees to the insurance carrier as clerical even though the employees may be working in the warehouse.

Workers' compensation insurance coverage in Illinois is mandatory. Every employer must carry workers' compensation insurance. However, not every company is able to procure workers' compensation insurance in the marketplace due to circumstances as diverse as to small a company to poor loss experience. For those employers, Illinois has the assigned risk market which is also known as the market of last resort. Whereas the insurance agent represents the insurance carrier in the regular marketplace, the agent represents the employer in the assigned risk market. The insurance carrier has no relationship with the insurance agent in the assigned risk market. In addition, it should be noted that the insurance carrier and the employer do not court each other in the assigned risk market. Those employers that apply for workers' compensation insurance through the assigned risk market have their policy assigned to the carrier by the Plan Administrator, the National Council on Compensation Insurance, otherwise known as NCCI. In this market, the carrier does not have the right to refuse to write the insurance for the employer.

Under normal circumstances an employer's workers' compensation insurance coverage is assigned to the insurance carrier. Through the insurance application, the employer has provided a general description of their business as well as an estimate of the total payroll broken down by the different workers' compensation insurance classifications. The estimated annual premium is paid in full with the application. The workers' compensation insurance policy is issued to the employer and coverage is in force. In some cases, the insurance carrier will perform a preliminary (or mid term) audit to verify the payroll totals and the insurance classifications. At the end of the annual policy period, the insurance carrier conducts an audit to verify the total payroll and the proper insurance classifications. Through the use of the final audit, the total policy premium is determined for the policy period.

SUMMARY OF EVENTS:

Windy City Labor Service applied for workers' compensation insurance in July 1998. Because Windy City was unable to procure workers' compensation insurance in the general market (all carriers approached by their insurance agent refused to offer coverage to them), Windy City Labor Service's [redacted] requested coverage through the Illinois Assigned Risk Market (a.k.a. the market of last resort). The application (exhibit #1) was sent to the National Council on Compensation Insurance (NCCI) which operates the assigned risk market for Illinois along with a check (exhibit # 2) for the initial deposit premium.

b6
b7C

In the policy application, Windy City Labor Service represented themselves as a "labor service — providing day to day manpower for various clients". Windy City Labor Service based its annual insurance premium on policy estimates that indicated they had over 200 employees and that over 92% of their payroll was either clerical office employees or professional employees of labor unions (a classification used for the actual employees running the union). Both carry a very low workers' compensation insurance rate.

Upon receipt of an application for workers' compensation insurance coverage from the insurance agency for Windy City Labor Service, NCCI requested that the insured complete the "Temporary Employment Contractor Information" questionnaire (exhibit #3). The questionnaire requires a complete list of the current clients as well as any shared ownership with a client. In response to this request from NCCI for additional information, [redacted] and the representatives of Windy City Labor Service (exhibit #4) provided the following information which included a list of clients as well as the statement "there is no common ownership with any client".

b6
b7C

- The following clients were identified by Windy City Labor Service:

[redacted]

Curtis Storage & Trucking (share ownership with Windy City Labor Service)

[redacted]

[redacted] (share office space and probable ownership with Windy City Labor)

[redacted] (share probable ownership with Windy City Labor)

Remedial Environmental Manpower (share office space and ownership with Windy City Labor)

- Windy City provides only clerical personnel to labor unions, not laborers or members. (yet no labor unions mentioned as clients)
- Windy City provides only clerical personnel to all of their clients. (claims past and present indicate otherwise)
- Windy City did not know anything about the operations of Remedial Environmental Manpower. (yet they share office space and ownership with REM)

NCCI reviewed the policy application, assigned the coverage to [redacted] and forwarded the premium to [redacted]. Upon assignment of the workers' compensation policy by NCCI, [redacted] issued policy number [redacted] (exhibit #5) for the policy term [redacted].

Furthermore, Windy City Labor Service indicated the only executive officer and owner was [redacted] and that it was not related through common management or ownership to any other company. In addition, the policy application seems to have been stamped rather than signed [redacted]. It appears from information provided to Kemper Insurance that [redacted] (exhibit #6) and that she does not actually run Windy City Labor Service. It has been indicated that the company is actually run by [redacted] John Duff, Jr. [redacted]. Further investigation has revealed that Windy City Labor Service has a DBA, Windy City Maintenance Company which has numerous contracts with the City of Chicago. Finally, it seems that Windy City Labor Service/Windy City Maintenance are related through common ownership to several other companies including, but not limited to Windy City Cartage, Remedial Environmental Manpower, Curtis Storage & Trucking and Hutchinson Trading Company.

A Kemper Insurance auditor attempted to conduct a preliminary audit on this account in September 1998. (exhibit #7) He was told to meet the insured at an address that was not reflected on the policy, 1024 W. Kinzie in Chicago. The auditor was shown a computer generated payroll recap that placed almost all of the payroll under the clerical classification. When the auditor asked the insured to provide accounting back up as well as the names and phone numbers of the clients, he was told that it was not available at that time. He was asked to return at a later date after the insured had the opportunity to put together the requested information. The insured would not return any of the auditor's subsequent phone calls, so he contacted their [redacted] [redacted] and requested assistance. Although assistance was promised, none was ever provided. The audit was returned to the Dallas office in November 1998 due to a lack of cooperation.

At the same time as an auditor was attempting to perform a preliminary audit, Kemper's Loss Control department was attempting to schedule a survey of the insured's operation. The Loss Control representative was refused access. The Loss Control representative spoke to the insured's designated contact by telephone in late January 1999, but was not provided access to their office or to their job sites (exhibit #8).

On [redacted] of Windy City Labor Service contacted [redacted] with Kemper Insurance. Windy City Labor Service was attempting to renew their workers' compensation insurance coverage on 7/5/99, but NCCI would not allow the renewal coverage to be written since Windy City Labor Service had not cooperated with Kemper's preliminary audit request in 1998. [redacted] Kemper to tell NCCI that Windy City Labor Service was now willing to cooperate. This request was refused at that time, although [redacted] was told that if she sent the payroll records by over night mail, the request would be considered.

On [redacted] for Windy City Labor Service, contacted [redacted] [redacted] Kemper Insurance and made the same request that [redacted] had made earlier in the day. The same conditions were outlined for [redacted].

Neither [redacted] provided any of the requested documentation. As such, NCCI was never told that Windy City Labor Service had cooperated on the audit.

[redacted] contacted Kemper Insurance to inform them that he thought Windy City Labor Service was hiding their warehouse payroll in the clerical classification. On [redacted] [redacted] was contacted and his allegations were clarified. [redacted] stated he was an [redacted] Ulico Casualty Corp and that he had been approached in [redacted] [redacted] about writing the workers' compensation insurance for Windy City Labor Service. At that time, [redacted] refused to bid on the insurance coverage, since almost all of the payroll was under the clerical classification. [redacted] was approached by [redacted] again on [redacted] about writing the insurance coverage for Windy City Labor Service. However, this time almost all of the payroll was placed under a more expensive warehouse classification. [redacted] [redacted] became suspicious, since this seemed to have been done only to make the account more enticing from a premium standpoint for [redacted] thus encouraging him to write the insurance. Once again, [redacted] was convinced that the actual owner of Windy City Labor Service was male, not female. [redacted] finished the conversation by stating that he was convinced that [redacted] was fully aware of the entire operation of Windy City Labor Service, Inc. [redacted] can be contacted at the following number.

b6

An auditor representing Kemper Insurance attempted to schedule an appointment to conduct the final audit on the workers' compensation policy on [redacted] with Windy City Labor Service canceled the appointment stating the records were not ready. An appointment was scheduled for [redacted] which was subsequently canceled on [redacted]. To this date, Windy City Labor Service has not allowed an audit of their records by a representative of Kemper Insurance.

Through various sources, Kemper Insurance has determined that Windy City Labor Service is actually a day labor service providing general labor to various industries in the Chicago area. The physical address of Windy City Labor Service is 174-178 N. Halsted in Chicago, Illinois. This has been referred to as an industrial area of town with very little professional foot traffic (which would be necessary for a temporary labor contractor that specializes in the supply of clerical help). In addition, it has been noted that Windy City Labor Service owns more than one van used to transport temporary laborers to their daily job sites. A temporary labor contractor specializing in clerical personnel does not have a need to transport their personnel to the client's site. This is typically reserved for temporary labor contractors that specialize in the use of "day laborers" performing non-clerical functions. Furthermore, representatives of Windy City Labor Service in interviews with Kemper claims adjusters have referred to Windy City Labor Service as a day labor agency.

In addition, the Chicago Tribune has recently written several articles (exhibit #9) on the business relationships of the Duff family. In those articles it has been noted that Windy City Labor Service is a "day labor" company that often uses the homeless to handle their work.

Furthermore, it has been alleged that Windy City Labor Service is providing almost all of the labor to load the trucks at Chicago area liquor distributors. Supposedly the labor unions run by the Duff's have a contract with these same distributors to supply all of the labor to load these same trucks. The following liquor distributors have been identified as clients using Windy City Labor Service to load trucks (in contrast to Windy City Labor Service's contention that they supply clerical only labor.

b6
b7C

In correspondence dated July 15, 1998, Windy City Labor indicated Romano Brothers was a client of theirs and all employees supplied to Romano Brothers as well as all other listed clients were clerical only. As with the other claimants, their duties as temporary employees did not match the duties indicated in written correspondence from Windy City Labor Service. During the period from July 5, 1998 and July 5, 1999, Windy City Labor Services submitted 10 claims for workers' compensation insurance coverage. All of these claims were for "laborers" involved in various industries. None of the claims involved injuries remotely related to clerical duties.

Finally, Windy City Labor Service has a workers' compensation insurance experience modifier of 2.78. This is comparable with their experience modifier for the past several years. The experience modifier is a formula used to even the "playing field" between companies in the insurance market. Since all companies in an industry must use the same classifications with the same rates, those companies that present an unsafe workplace with numerous claims are presented with a debit experience modifier based upon the number of claims versus the total amount of premium paid. An experience modifier of 2.78 indicates Windy City Labor Service is paying workers' compensation insurance at 2.78 times the standard rates. A premium of $100 becomes $278. An experience modifier this high is an indicator of a payroll that has been seriously misclassified for many years.

CONCLUSION:

The workers' compensation insurance policy for Windy City Labor Service was issued in July 1998 based upon the information provided by Windy City Labor Service and [REDACTED]. An examination of the insurance application and Temporary Employment Contractor questionnaire shows several areas in which the insured and their agent purposely misstated the facts.

Subsequent correspondence from both the insured and their agent stated that the payroll was primarily clerical in nature and that they were not related to any of their known clients. However, information found in the past several weeks leads us to believe that the large majority of their payroll is actually non-clerical in nature and that they are related through both ownership and management to several companies including several clients.

The following points are intended to show the likelihood of misrepresentation on the part of Windy City Labor Service and their insurance agent:

- The business location is in an area of Chicago typically used by "non-clerical" day labor firms.
- The insured themselves refer to their company as a day labor service
- All 10 claims submitted by the insured during the policy period are non-clerical in nature
- The experience modifier based upon the past several years of experience indicates Windy City's employee's have been misclassified for workers' compensation purposes for several years.
- Windy City Labor Service owns vans used for the transportation of employees to their respective jobs which is not a service typically provided to clerical employees.
- Windy City Labor Service uses the homeless as employees.
- Windy City Labor Service has failed to allow an audit of their records. The one time an auditor was allowed to visit Windy City Labor Service, they were directed to an address not identified as Windy City Labor Service (1024 W. Kinzie) rather than the known address on Halsted. (best to avoid the obvious questions about the clerical or lack of clerical employees)
- Windy City Labor Service has failed to supply a complete list of their clients. The only clients made known to Kemper Insurance at this point are related through ownership and

- management to Windy City Labor Service, or seem to have very close business ties to the Duff family such as Romano Beverages.
- Windy City Labor Service failed to allow Kemper's loss control representative to visit their job sites.

By failing to allow the audit, Windy City Labor Service has managed to hide their full payroll from Kemper Insurance. In addition, it has been impossible to obtain a full client list which could have been used to independently verify the total payroll and the type of work handled by Windy City Labor Service employees.

Although the failure to allow an audit has made it impossible to accurately determine the total premium owed by Windy City Labor Service, it can be determined that Windy City Labor Service should have paid premiums in excess of $300,000 during this policy period, but only paid $56,695.

U.S. jury subpoenas city data on Duff firms

and Ray Gibson
Tribune staff reporters

A federal grand jury has subpoenaed records from City Hall related to a mob-connected family whose janitorial company has won tens of millions of dollars in city-related contracts since Mayor Richard Daley took office.

In a subpoena dated Feb. 11, federal prosecutors asked the city's deputy budget director, Bill Cerney, to deliver "all employee expense tax records" filed by four companies, at least three of which are directly related to the Duff family, whose ties to organized crimes date back four decades.

The request, signed by Assistant U.S. Atty. Charles Ex, seeks records from the companies dating to Jan. 1, 1998. The companies are Windy City Maintenance, Windy City Labor Service, Remedial Environmental Manpower and Remedial Daily Labor.

Cerney was instructed to deliver the records to the grand jury on Feb. 14. The subpoena was obtained by the Tribune under the Illinois Freedom of Information Act.

DUFF: Grand jury seeks McPier records

sought records on at least one Duff company, Windy City Maintenance, from the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority (McPier), which oversees McCormick Place and Navy Pier, sources said. Windy City Maintenance, a janitorial firm, has held a cleaning contract with the authority since 1996, and the authority board is expected to decide whether to renew its contract in the coming weeks.

Officials with the U.S. attorney's office declined to comment. The Duffs' attorney, James Streicker, could not be located for comment.

Jennifer Hoyle, spokeswoman for the city's Law Department, said city officials were cooperating.

Federal prosecutors have been investigating the Duffs for more than two years, a probe prompted by a July 1999 Tribune investigation that found Windy City Maintenance, which had won tens of millions of dollars in government contract set-asides for woman-owned firms, was actually run by men in the Duff family.

The Tribune also reported that a day labor company controlled by the Duffs, Windy City Labor, was supplying non-union labor to liquor distributors whose employees were represented by a union run by the Duff family, a possible labor violation.

To date, the federal investigation has focused on those labor violations by the Duffs' union, the Liquor and Wine Sales Representatives, Tire, Plastic and Allied Workers Union, sources said.

The latest subpoena suggests the investigation has now expanded. Though federal prosecutors asked city officials for records on Windy City Maintenance in January 2000, there has been little additional evidence they were actively pursuing the Duffs' contracts at City Hall.

The Tribune reported Windy City Maintenance had used its status as a woman-owned company to win millions in contracts from the Daley administration and the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, a joint city/state agency. The city requires that 25 percent of all contracts be awarded to minority- and woman-owned firms.

The company had earned its woman-owned status by stating it was owned and operated by Patricia Green. The Tribune found Patricia Green was actually Patricia Green Duff, and the company was run by her husband, John Duff Jr., and their sons.

In the years since Daley took office, Windy City Maintenance had been hired to clean up after city festivals such as Taste of Chicago and to provide janitorial services at the Harold Washington Library, the International Terminal at O'Hare International Airport, Navy Pier, McCormick Place and several police stations.

Remedial Environmental Manpower was formed in 1988 by Patricia Green and William Stratton, an African-American who was a longtime employee of the Duffs' union. Stratton was also a director for Windy City Maintenance.

Remedial Environmental Manpower's initial request to be certified as a minority-owned company in 1993 was rejected by the city because Stratton "appears to be substantially reliant on James Duff," one of the sons, an investigation found. However, a year later, Stratton convinced city officials he owned the company, though city officials said they lost documents explaining why they approved the company's minority certification.

Though it had virtually no business beforehand, Remedial Environmental Manpower was selected in 1995 as the main sub-contractor on the city's massive blue-bag recycling program, a contract that pays the firm as much as $9 million a year.

It was not known what, if any, connection the Duff family has to Remedial Daily Labor.

After the Tribune investigation, Daley vowed his own investigation of the Duffs' companies. The results of the city probe concluded Windy City Maintenance was controlled by a woman when it first got city business but eventually was taken over by the Duff men. There was no evidence of willful wrongdoing, according to administration officials.

Patricia Green's husband, John Duff Jr., once testified on behalf of mob boss Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, who faced income-tax fraud charges. Duff's testimony helped the mobster's defense but ultimately cost Duff his job as a city investigator.

He later pleaded guilty to embezzling union funds in Chicago and Detroit and spent 17 months in prison.

One of his three sons, John Duff III, has also been associated with organized crime.

He once testified mob boss Ernest Rocco Infelice gave him a break on a gambling debt, and he boasted about his organized-crime ties when he was arrested in Florida in 1993 for threatening to kill a police officer, charges that were later dismissed.

To Joey A, also known as Joe "The Builder" Andriacchi.

cc: Rocky Infelice (who is away for a while), Johnny "No Nose" DiFronzo, Joey "The Clown" Lombardo and the rest of the bosses of the Chicago Outfit.

Hey, Youse Wise Guys:

I was having lunch at Gene & Georgetti on Friday with two of my good friends—a Fox-TV analyst and the spokesman for the Illinois Supreme Court.

And three well-known Chicago toughs walked up to our table.

These toughs boast of having supreme connections with Outfit bosses and throw out the big names around town.

The Duffs.

What surprised me is that they're interested in my family.

They say they never see my little boys playing out in front of my home. They say it is quiet in front of our house.

I've written a lot about the Duffs and Daley. And they don't like that. A federal grand jury is investigating how the Duffs got their $100 million, including their affirmative action contracts for minorities and women.

Daley must be extremely nearsighted because the Duffs sure don't look like black women to me.

Here's what happened:

Sitting with me at lunch at Gene's was Thom Serafin, the respected political consultant and Fox News analyst.

Also with us was Joseph Tybor. He's a former Tribune colleague, a lawyer and currently the spokesman for the state Supreme Court.

Thom excused himself to use the facilities. Joe and I were talking White Sox baseball when three tough and chunky Duffs walked up to the table.

It was like a scene from "The Sopranos," but without Paulie Walnuts.

"Hey, Kass," one of them said. "I'm Jack Duff."

He stuck his hand out and I took it, and we kept squeezing, although it wasn't friendly.

"I live near you. My kids play on your block sometimes, and you know what?" he asked.

What?

"I've never seen your kids out in front."

He smiled into my eyes, still gripping my hand.

"And I've never seen anyone in front of your house," he said. "Ever."

What?

"I don't see anybody outside your house. Ever," he said.

After delivering his clumsy message, he tried to leave, but I kept hold of his hand, mentioning that we should have a beer sometime, so I could keep him there talking, so I could think.

Here was a Duff who likes my home so much that he tells me he watches it intently, he sees who comes and goes, wonders about my kids.

Two other Duffs were right behind him, the father, Jack Duff Sr., and another chunky son, who identified himself as Jim Duff.

"Where do you want to meet?" asked Jim Duff. "Want us to come over? Is that it? Huh? You want us to come over? Huh?"

Outfit bosses sometimes hang out at La Scarola on Grand Avenue on Fridays. So I told them we should meet there.

"We don't go there anymore," said Jim Duff, sadly as they walked away. "We don't go there."

I'm sure our social secretaries can arrange a luncheon, perhaps a high tea, with the Duffs, the mayor and me.

But the Duffs and Daley must promise not to scarf up all the crumpets and the cucumber sandwiches before I get there.

After they'd left, Thom Serafin sat back down at the table. He was angry he missed the show.

Sitting at a nearby table was a former Chicago police superintendent, who stopped by to say hello and heard the story from us.

Without prompting, the former police superintendent said, "It sounds like a threat to me."

Joe Tybor, of the state Supreme Court, was fascinated the Duffs repeated the line about my home.

"He said it twice," said Joe, later. "Not once but twice."

People who don't like what I write complain to me personally all the time. Sometimes they get angry, even tough guys get angry, but I don't write about it.

But don't mention my children or my home. Ever.

I thought that was against the rules.

It could have been a threat. Or simple stupidity. Or it could have been panic brought by a federal grand jury. I can't say.

Obviously, this is a question of style. So I'm hoping that you, Joe Andriacchi, you, Johnny DiFronzo, and the rest of the real tough guys can enlighten us.

Miss Manners can't answer this, but you can. Why don't you drop me an e-mail to explain the proper wise guy etiquette here, OK?

Duffs' accounts probed by U.S.

Park Ridge bank tied to subpoena

By Ray Gibson
Tribune staff reporter

The U.S. Department of Labor has subpoenaed the personal and business accounts of a politically connected family at a Park Ridge bank that held union funds controlled by members of the family.

According to court records, the investigation focuses on whether the Duff family has received favorable interest rates on personal loans and other financial perks for maintaining the union funds at Park Ridge Community Bank.

Federal prosecutors have been investigating the Duff family for more than two years. The probe began after Tribune disclosures that a janitorial firm owned by the family had improperly won tens of millions of dollars in government contracts and that the family-run day-labor business supplied workers to liquor distributors where a union controlled by the Duffs had labor contracts.

Just months ago, lawyers for the family unsuccessfully fought to block the subpoena filing suit in U.S. District Court.

In the court case, a federal agent said in an affidavit that he launched a probe of Local 3 of the Liquor and Allied Workers Sales Division's health and welfare fund in October 2000.

Two of the trustees of the fund are John Duff III and his brother Patrick. Another brother, James, was a vice president at Local 3, which represents liquor salesmen.

Their parents are John Duff Jr. and Patricia Green Duff. She was listed as owner of Windy City Maintenance, a janitorial business that city investigators concluded wasn't being operated as a female-owned business. The father was listed as an owner of Windy City Labor Services, the firm that provided day laborers to liquor businesses.

An attorney for the Duffs declined to comment on the investigation. Bank Chairman Eugene Carter also declined to comment, as did a spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Labor.

A federal grand jury this year subpoenaed records at City Hall and the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority relating to tens of millions of dollars in business Windy City Maintenance had won at the two agencies.

The Duff family has been active in raising political donations for Mayor Richard M. Daley, and its companies are donors to Democratic and Republican candidates. Two members of the family have had ties to organized-crime bosses.

John Duff Jr. once testified on behalf of mob boss Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, who was facing federal income-tax fraud charges. John Duff Jr. later pleaded guilty to embezzling union funds in Chicago and Detroit and spent 17 months in prison.

John Duff III was ousted in 2000 from the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union after investigators alleged he knowingly associated with organized-crime figures, was a ghost payroller and ran an illegal bookmaking operation in Florida.

The Labor Department probe began with a routine audit of the union's $3.2 million health and welfare fund. Auditors noticed that about $750,000 of the fund was held in a single account at the Park Ridge Bank, exceeding the $100,000 federal insurance limit, according to court records.

With $650,000 of the fund at risk, the auditors last year cited the fund for violating its fiduciary responsibility. Then it issued the subpoena for an extensive list of records, including personal accounts of all five family members, loans to family members and business accounts.

With $152 million in assets, Park Ridge is a mid-size community bank. Carter said he started the bank in July 1995 with his son, Thomas, who is the bank's president.

Land records show that at least three of the Duff family members and an attorney for the fund have received loans from the bank.

In May 1997, James Duff borrowed $450,000 from the Park Ridge bank and another $150,000 from a La Grange bank to buy a $710,000 home in La Grange.

He refinanced the home two years later with another lender when mortgage rates decreased.

In 1996, John Duff Jr. and his wife purchased two units in a Hollywood, Fla., condominium building. Land records indicate he paid $242,300 for the properties. Florida land records indicate the couple has a $400,000 mortgage from the Park Ridge bank on the condominiums.

Labor leaders have been charged criminally in the past for using their influence over union funds to obtain personal loans from banks.

Last summer, a federal jury convicted John Serpico, a former international vice president of the Laborers Union, and another union official of obtaining $5 million in personal loans at favorable rates after the deposit of about $4 million at Capitol Bank and Trust.

Capitol Bank pleaded guilty in 1996 to its role in the scheme and was fined $800,000.

Board unanimous in dumping janitorial company

By Ray Gibson
Tribune staff reporter

A politically connected janitorial firm that was paid more than $50 million since 1996 for cleaning McCormick Place and Navy Pier was dumped Tuesday when the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority board awarded the agency's most lucrative contract to a rival firm.

Windy City Maintenance Inc., under investigation by a federal grand jury, lost the contract in a unanimous vote by the board, which selected ARAMARK ServiceMaster.

Without comment, the board rejected a recommendation by staff that the janitorial service contract be divided between Windy City and ARAMARK.

Windy City, which is controlled by the Duff family, won the contract in 1996 after McPier officials tossed out the first round of bids, in which three competitors underbid Windy City. The firm then lowered its price by $1.3 million and was awarded the five-year contract.

When the contract expired last year, the board extended it while it sought new proposals, but that process generated controversy.

The Tribune reported in 1999 that Windy City had reaped more than $100 million in city-related and McPier business, some of it by using its status as a woman-owned business to capture contracts set aside for firms run by women or minorities. Despite that designation, the firm was run by men in the Duff family, the Tribune found.

CONTRACT: Jury probing how Duffs got last contract

The Cook County state's attorney's office is reviewing the bid process for the new McPier contract after the bids of the seven competing firms were illegally revealed to one of the bidders. The board asked for the investigation in May and also asked outside accountants to review the bid process.

A spokesman for the state's attorney's office declined comment on the inquiry.

Meanwhile, a federal grand jury continues to investigate how the Duffs won the McPier contract as well as millions of dollars in city contracts.

Board member Patrick Daly said the amount to be paid to Downers Grove-based ARA-MARK is being negotiated.

Daly said staff members had recommended dividing the contract, but the board overruled the recommendation. He did not elaborate.

How the deal to keep Windy City fell through is unclear. John Ruel, a board member who sources said didn't favor keeping Windy City, declined to com-

The authority has been battling public relations setbacks in recent months.

In April, its chief executive officer, Scott Fawell, was indicted on federal racketeering charges that he used state employees to do political work for Gov. George Ryan's campaign in 1998. Fawell, who is on paid leave from his $195,000 post, has pleaded not guilty to the charges.

In May, a McPier board member, Lawrence Warner, was indicted on federal charges that he paid bribes for multimillion-dollar contracts and leases during George Ryan's tenure as secretary of state. Warner also pleaded not guilty.

In June, there were published reports of Fawell throwing parties for Senate President James "Pate" Philip and board member James Bolin. Both later reimbursed McPier for the events.

Last month, an owner of one of the companies that Windy City uses on the Navy Pier and McCormick Place contract testified in the federal corruption trial of Cicero Town President Betty Loren-Maltese and seven others.

In his testimony, Anthony Leopold said his family-owned janitorial business, We Clean Inc., borrowed nearly $180,000 over several years from Michael Spano Jr., whose father is the reputed head of organized crime in Cicero. Prosecutors say the money Leopold received was stolen from Cicero as part of an elaborate $10 million fraud scheme.

ily also have ties to organized crime figures. John Duff Jr. once testified on behalf of the late mob chieftain Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, who was facing income tax fraud charges. Duff later pleaded guilty to embezzling union funds in Chicago and Detroit and spent 17 months in prison.

One of his sons, John Duff III, was ousted in 2000 from the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union after investigators said he associated with organized-crime figures.

The Duff family has been active in raising funds for Mayor Richard Daley and its companies are donors to Democratic and Republican candidates.

After a five-month investigation in 1999, the city concluded that Windy City was not run by John Duff Jr.'s wife, Patricia Green Duff, as the firm had claimed. The decertification as a woman-owned company led to the cancellation of $1 million in city contracts.

In 2000, the company lost the job of cleaning up after city festivals, a move that cost the firm about $573,000 a year in business. In addition, the firm lost city business at Harold Washington Library and the International Terminal at O'Hare International Airport, where it was a subcontractor.

One Duff-related firm still has business with the city. That company, Remedial Environmental, Manpower has been paid more than $36 million for work on its blue bag recycling program.

Last month, Remedial filed documents with the city showing that John Duff Jr. and Patricia Green Duff owned the company along with William Stratton. The Duffs are white and Stratton is African-American. The firm had been at the center of a dispute about whether the Duffs owned it or whether it was minority-owned.

The recent filing showed that Stratton owns 60 percent of the company's stock and Patricia Green Duff holds 40 percent.

City was informed of Duff suspicions

In '99, inspector reported doubts woman ran firm

By Ray Gibson
and Laurie Cohen
Tribune staff reporters

Almost three years ago, when the City of Chicago stripped Windy City Maintenance of its status as a woman-owned firm, officials stopped short of saying the controversial company had actively deceived anyone.

The firm had erroneously stated it was run by Patricia Green, but that was only because Green once was in charge and had since handed off some of her duties, city officials concluded.

But a recently discovered City Hall document shows that behind the scenes, a city inspector was suspicious that Green ran the firm because she seemed unable to grasp basic points about how the business operated.

Though the inspector never concluded deception was involved, he reported he was "stunned" by Green's lack of business knowledge.

James Streicker, a lawyer for the Duff family, which controls Windy City, declined comment on the report. Two members of the Duff family have been linked to the mob by authorities, and the family has political ties to Mayor Richard M. Daley.

The report, which provides the first public glimpse of the city's investigation of Windy City, shows inspector Robert Cunniff made several surprise visits to the firm, but Green was never around. When Cunniff finally reached Green by phone, he was surprised she knew so little about Windy City's operations.

"I asked about the cost of her services, and she responded that 'she didn't know.' Not only that, she didn't seem to know who did know. . . . We are not discussing a minor detail here. This is the cost of her service!" he wrote.

The city has denied Tribune requests for documents relating to the investigation. Cunniff's report turned up misfiled with city records on another janitorial outfit.

His report was filed in August 1999, five months before the city decertified the company and the month following janitorial firm had improperly won tens of millions of dollars in government contracts by falsely claiming to be owned by a woman.

At the Dec. 31, 1999, news conference, Corporation Counsel Mara Georges said the city's investigation had found "no evidence of an affirmative action by them to engage in deception."

Georges said control of the firm had been gradually turned over to male members of the Duff family partly because Green, the family matriarch, had health problems. (Green's married name is Green Duff.)

There was no evidence of fraud, Georges said, because company officials believed that Green's diminished role at Windy City met the statutory definition of being a woman-owned enterprise.

Had the city found any evidence of fraud, officials could have barred the firm from receiving city business for three years and referred the case to law enforcement authorities for investigation.

Although the city didn't ask for an investigation, federal prosecutors launched a probe of the firm following the Tribune article. The investigation is ongoing, authorities said.

Cunniff tried to interview Green more than six weeks before the Tribune story was published in July 1999. His visit came after Windy City submitted its annual papers to be re-

The Tribune reported in 1999 that Windy City Maintenance, at 1024 W. Kinzie St., improperly won tens certified as a woman-owned business enterprise, a designation that allows companies to cash in on city policies mandating that women and minorities receive a chunk of city work.

"On June 9th of this year, I went, unannounced, to the above address; but Patricia Green, the president, was not in," Cunniff wrote in his report. "I stated my intent, but no one seemed to know of her whereabouts or of her expected time back."

After failing to locate Green, Cunniff wrote that he was "directed to leave it alone" until August 1999. He apparently went back as part of the city's 5-month long investigation of the Duff family that led to the Dec. 31 news conference.

Cunniff made two more surprise visits, but Green was never in the office. He finally reached her by phone. She suggested he try back the next week, according to the report, and asked him "to surprise her" with the time of my call."

When Cunniff got Green on the phone, she had little knowledge about the details of the company. "The President of a company can delegate whatever she wants, but to have no knowledge of something as basic as costing does remain a mystery," he wrote.

Jennifer Hoyle, a spokeswoman for the city's Law Department, said Cunniff's report didn't contradict anything Georges said at the news conference.

Hoyle said the report "was filed where it was supposed to be until recently."

Jessica Maxey-Faulkner, a spokeswoman for the city's Procurement Services Department, which handles certification of minority- and woman-owned businesses, said Cunniff wasn't ordered to back off the case in June. He was only advised to pursue other assignments and return to work on the case at a later date. Cunniff declined to be interviewed.

As a result of the city action, Windy City lost millions of dollars in contracts with the city. Earlier this month, the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority awarded the company's most lucrative contract—a $10 million a year cleaning contract at Navy Pier and McCormick Place—to a rival firm.

The Duff family has been active in raising political donations for Daley, and its companies are donors to both Democrats and Republicans.

Two members of the family have had ties to organized-crime bosses. John Duff Jr., the husband of Green, once testified on behalf of former mob boss Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, who was on trial for federal income tax fraud. The elder Duff later pleaded guilty to embezzling union funds.

One of his sons, John Duff III, was ousted in 2000 from the union representing hotel and restaurant employees after investigators alleged he knowingly associated with organized-crime figures, was a ghost payroller in the union and ran an illegal bookmaking operation in Florida.

APPLICANT'S STATEMENT

The undersigned applicant hereby certifies that he/she has read and understands the statements in this application. As further consideration of policy issuance, the applicant also certifies that the responses provided in this application are true and furthermore agrees:

To maintain a complete record of all payroll transactions in such form as the insurance company may reasonably require and that such record will be available to the company at the designated address.

To comply substantially with all laws, orders, rules, and regulations in force and effect made by the public authorities relating to the welfare, health, and safety of employees.

To comply with all reasonable recommendations made by the insurance company relating to the welfare, health, and safety of employees.

To take no action in any form to evade the application of experience modification determined in accordance with the experience rating rules, as determined by the Plan Administrator.

The undersigned applicant also certifies he/she has had no difficulties with any producer or company in regard to: (a) payroll records; (b) the amount of premium charged; (c) the payment of premium; (d) the carrying out of any recommendation made for the purpose of safeguarding employees; (e) the handling of any claim or accident report except the following:

Violation of any of these agreements may result in cancellation of a policy of insurance issued under a Workers Compensation Insurance Plan.

The undersigned applicant understands also that coverage is NOT bound until the signed application is received with appropriate premium and eligibility is determined by the administrator. Provided that applicant is determined to be eligible and in good faith entitled to WCIP insurance, based upon the information provided herein or otherwise available, coverage will be bound in accordance with plan rules. See individual state plans for applicable binding rules.

The undersigned applicant understands further that since he/she has been unable to secure workers compensation coverage through any other insurance provider, this coverage is being afforded through a Workers Compensation Insurance Plan, and that the rates charged may be higher than those in the voluntary market.

The following statement is only applicable in jurisdictions where the NCCI, Inc. Loss Sensitive Rating Plan has been approved for use:

By signing below I acknowledge that the NCCI, Inc. Loss Sensitive Rating Plan has been explained to me or that an explanatory notice or brochure has been provided to me and I agree that I shall be bound by the terms of such plan if my estimated annual premium or preliminary physical audit premium meets or exceeds the premium eligibility requirement.

APPLICANT'S STATEMENT

The undersigned applicant hereby certifies that he/she has read and understands the statements in this application. As further consideration of policy issuance, the applicant also certifies that the responses provided in this application are true and furthermore agree:

To maintain a complete record of all payroll transactions in such form as the insurance company may reasonably require and that such record will be available to the company at the designated address.

To comply substantially with all laws, orders, rules, and regulations in force and effect made by the public authorities relating to the welfare, health, and safety of employees.

To comply with all reasonable recommendations made by the insurance company relating to the welfare, health, and safety of employees.

To take no action in any form to evade the application of experience modification determined in accordance with the experience rating rules, as determined by the Plan Administrator.

The undersigned applicant also certifies he/she has had no difficulties with any producer or company in regard to: (a) payroll recorder; (b) the amount of premium charged; (c) the payment of premium; (d) the carrying out of any recommendation made for the purpose of safeguarding employees; (e) the handling of any claim or accident report except the following:

Violation of any of these agreements may result in cancellation of a policy of insurance issued under a Workers Compensation Insurance Plan.

The undersigned applicant understands also that coverage is NOT bound until the signed application is received with appropriate premium and eligibility is determined by the administrator. Provided that applicant is determined to be eligible and in good faith entitled to WCIP insurance, based upon the information provided herein or otherwise available, coverage will be bound in accordance with plan rules. See individual state plans for applicable binding rules.

The undersigned applicant understands further that since he/she has been unable to secure workers compensation coverage through any other insurance provider, this coverage is being afforded through a Workers Compensation Insurance Plan, and that the rates charged may be higher than those in the voluntary market.

The following statement is only applicable in jurisdictions where the NCCI, Inc. Loss Sensitive Rating Plan has been approved for use:

By signing below I acknowledge that the NCCI, Inc. Loss Sensitive Rating Plan has been explained to me or that an explanatory notice or brochure has been provided to me and I agree that I shall be bound by the terms of such plan if my estimated annual premium or preliminary physical audit premium meets or exceeds the premium eligibility requirement.

THIS LETTER IS TO INFORM YOU OF THE FOLLOWING:

WINDY CITY LABOR SERVICE LOCATED ON <sup>1013</sup>~~5200~~ W. MADISON STREET IS A NEW LABOR SERVICE AND OPERATED BY JACK DUFF, EX PRESIDENT OF LOCAL 62 DISTILLERY WORKERS UNION.

HE HAS BEEN USING STRONG ARM MUSCLE AND THREATS TO THE LIQUOR DISTRIBUTORS AND WHOLESALERS TO USE HIS HELP OF WHICH HE DEMANDS AND CHARGES MORE THAN CAN BE GOTTEN FROM ANY OTHER SOURCE.

JACK DUFF IS UNDER INDICTMENT OR NOW POSSIBLY IN JAIL FOR UNION IRREGULARITIES.

JACK DUFF HAS USED HIS LABOR SERVICE TO PICKET AND DEMONSTRATE FOR THE UNION FOR RESTAURANTS AND HOTELS UNION THROUGHOUT THE LOOP AREA. HE HAS BEEN PAID BY THE UNION TO DO THIS IN ORDER TO GET THE RESTAURANTS TO JOIN UP.

THREATS AND HARM AS WELL AS SERIOUS DAMAGES AND HARM HAS BEEN GIVEN BY JACK DUFF BECAUSE HE HAS BEEN REMOVED FROM THE UNION BECAUSE OF HIS PROBLEMS WITH THE GOVERNMENT REGARDING THIS SAME TYPE OF ACTION.

THEREFORE HE NEEDS INCOME AND HAS PUT A SERIOUS CLAMP ON THE LIQUOR WHOLESALERS TO USE HIS ~~HXXX~~ HELP AND SERVICES OR ELSE AND AT A RATE THAT IS FAR ABOVE WHAT WE HAVE BEEN PAYING BEFORE TO ANYONE FOR THE SAME SERVICES.

HE WAS CONNECTED BEFORE WITH THE UNIONS OF [REDACTED] THIS TYPE OF HOOLIGANISM MUST NOT BE TOLERATED BY YOU OR US IF WE ARE TO BE FREE TO OPERATE IN A FREE SOCIETY WITH THE FREEDOM AND JUST THAT WE ARE ENTITLED TO HERE IN AMERICA.

THIS MAN IS MEAN AND RUTHLESS AND HAS CAUSED MUCH HARM TO MANY PEOPLE AND HAS HURT MANY AS WELL IN REGARDS TO INJURIES FROM HIM. A PERSON CAN NOT LIVE IN THIS FEAR ON A DAILY BASIS NOT KNOWING WHAT HE WILL DO OR WHAT HIS NEXT DEMANDS WILL BE.

I CANNOT SIGN THIS LETTER BECAUSE I AM TERRIFIED FOR MY LIFE WITH THE ANTICS OF THIS GANG DICTATING TO US.

This investigation was initiated on receipt of an anonymous letter alleging that Jack Duff, former president of Distillery Workers Union Local 62, is currently involved with the operations of Windy City Labor Services, Incorporated, 1043 West Madison, Chicago, Illinois, a day labor service.

The letter alleges that Windy City Labor has been using strong arm muscle and threats to liquor distributors and wholesalers in the Chicago area to force them to utilize the services of Windy City at an inflated price.

Duff is currently incarcerated in the Metropolitan Correctional Center (MCC), Chicago, following convictions for unlawful payments to union officials and embezzlement of union funds. His mandatory release date is March 10, 1984, with a date of parole eligibility of March 20, 1983.

Duff arrived at MCC, Chicago, on July 9, 1982, and was initially involved in a limited work release program.

Investigation at the Illinois Secretary of State's Office, Corporate Records Section, revealed that Windy City Labor was incorporated on June 15, 1982, by [redacted] Chicago, Illinois. The registered agent is listed as [redacted]. The purpose listed for the corporation is to furnish temporary labor and/or services on a

[redacted] Gold Seal Liquors, 707 West Harrison, Chicago, Illinois, telephone [redacted] was advised of the identities of the interviewing Agents, and he provided the following information:

b6
b7C

Employees for Gold Seal Liquors are currently represented by three unions, Liquor and Allied Workers Local 3, Liquor and Wine Salesmen Local 62, and Teamsters Local 705. The contracts are negotiated by the Illinois Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association, of which Gold Seal is a member.

Gold Seal often make use of temporary labor services, normally to help out in the warehouse to unload or load a truck or clean up the warehouse area.

[redacted] believes this may possibly be a violation of the company's contract with Local 3, but adds that the company has always made some use of temporary labor services and they have received no complaints about it from Local 3.

[redacted] advised that they utilize Windy City Labor Services almost exclusively when they need temporary labor. Prior to Windy City they used Laborama.

[redacted] with Local 3.

b6
b7C

[redacted] believes Jack Duff may have contacted him a year or so ago and told him he was starting a temporary labor service, asking [redacted] to give the service a try, but [redacted] has received no pressure from the Duffs of Local 3 to utilize Windy City services.

Windy City for services are competitive with other temporary labor companies.

On June 6, 1983, SA [REDACTED] met with Strike Force Attorney [REDACTED] concerning the future investigation of captioned matters. The following observations were made:

1) Even though Jack Duff is barred from the Labor Movement for five years, he is still a worthwhile target for investigation.

b6
b7C

2) The development of potential Taft-Hartley or Hobbs Act violations against [REDACTED] would take a lengthy commitment of time and manpower because of the following:

- a) Local Three records would have to be subpoenaed for leads of potential victims.
- b) Interviews (numerous) would have to be conducted to establish the Taft-Hartley or Hobbs Act violations.

3) Currently, the Department of Justice is not giving favorable consideration to prosecution of matters involving only Taft-Hartley violations.

4) Investigation, to date, of Windy City Labor Service, has failed to develop any conclusive testimony of Hobbs Act violations.

Dear Sir:

On May 3, 1984, Special Agent (SA) [redacted] Federal Bureau of Investigation, conferred with [redacted] concerning the results of an investigation of the matter referred to above.
Background information concerning the investigation is set forth.

In October, 1982, the Chicago Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) received a typewritten letter from an anonymous source concerning the activities of Jack Duff. The source advised that Duff, the former secretary-treasurer of the Distillery Workers Union, Local 3, (Local 3), was now furnishing temporary labor to wholesale liquor distributors in the Chicago area. The source indicated that Duff was forcing the distributors to contract with him for temporary labor rather than with other labor services.

From 1975 to 1982 Jack Duff served as the secretary-treasurer of Local 3. The membership of Local 3 is composed of clerical and warehouse employees of wholesale liquor distributors. In April, 1982, Duff was convicted of embezzlement and falsification of union records in violation of Title 29, Section 501(c), and Title 29, Section 439(c), respectively. As of April 22, 1982, Duff was barred from serving in any official capacity in any labor union for a period of five years, in accordance with the provisions of the Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

In June, 1982, Windy City Labor Service, Inc., (WCLS) was incorporated in Illinois by [REDACTED]. The registered agent was listed as [REDACTED]. WCLS was formed to furnish temporary labor and/or services on a day-to-day basis for persons or businesses requiring same. Surveillances verified that WCLS was located at 1043 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois. A vehicle known to be driven by [REDACTED] was observed parked in front of WCLS on one occasion.

In [REDACTED] a federal court order was issued for the installation of pen registers on [REDACTED]. An examination of outgoing telephone calls determined that [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Interviews were conducted [REDACTED] of four of the distributors. All of the distributors had been using the temporary labor services of Laborama, Inc., but had since switched to WCLS. During the summer of 1982, Jack Duff had approached each distributor and asked each if the company would consider using WCLS in the future. None [REDACTED] admitted that they used the services of WCLS because of expressed or implied threats of labor problems if WCLS was not used.

In November, 1983, [REDACTED] Laborama, Inc., was interviewed. He verified that he had lost business to WCLS. He could not provide a reason why the wholesale liquor distributors switched to WCLS.

Since January, 1984, subpoenaed records have been reviewed and interviews have been conducted to determine if [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

In summary, the allegation of the anonymous source that Duff was, or is, forcing wholesale liquor distributors to use unwanted labor has not been verified through interviews. Further investigation of this matter by the FBI will be held in abeyance pending a prosecutive opinion by your office.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD D. HEGARTY

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 3/30/94

On March 18, 1994, the COOPERATING WITNESS (CW) provided the following information to Special Agent (SA) [redacted]
[redacted]
[redacted]
[redacted]

DUFF SR. advised CW that Congressman DAN ROSTENKOWSKI (D-ILL) would be traveling to South Florida, during the weekend of March 19, 1994. During this conversation, DUFF, SR. advised CW that ROSTENKOWSKI was going to be indicted and charged with stolen stamps, and gifts which were given to employees by ROSTENKOWSKI. DUFF SR. advised that Congressman ROSTENKOWSKI felt as though he (ROSTENKOWSKI) would have no problem confronting these charges in court, if that is all they (the Government) had against him.
